BUENOS AYRES, SATURDAY, APRIL 9th, 1831.

[Vol. v.]

BUENOS AYRES.

Some details were published on the 5th inst., entitled "Intelligence from the Auxiliary Confederate Army, and from Entreríos,"—containing the following particulars. A communication dated Esquina de Ballesteros, 21st ult., from Commandant Manuel Lopez to Col. P. Echague, stating, that having been informed of some enemies' parties employed in collecting horses, and plundering with this intent the inhabitants who had not emigrated—he sent 40 men on the 17th, commanded by Lieut. P. Olazabal, who fell in with and routed a party of them, taking prisoner the Commandant, (Ramon Tolosa,) likewise six soldiers and a sergeant, (one man was killed,) the rest were pursued for 8 leagues, until they had abandoned one hundred and more horses, &c. &c.

Two intercepted letters addressed to Señor Julian Martinez, from an officer in the Army of Gen. Paz, (Agustin Pino,) one was dated in Camp, 13th ult.; the other Rio de los Sauces, 17th do, complaining of the critical situation in which he and his troops were placed without resources, and only a weak force, and expressing the greatest apprehensions thereon.

A communication from the delegate Governor of Santa Fé, (Don Pedro de Larrechea) to the Governor of Buenos Ayres, (Don Juan Manuel de Rosas,) stating, that he had received notice from the latter, that a squadron of cavalry from the Army of reserve was ordered to be placed at the disposal of the Government of Santa Fé, destined in aid of that of Entreríos, that he had informed the delegate Governor of Entreríos, and provided every thing requisite to accelerate the march of the said cavalry, but he had received advices from the latter, stating, that the proffered aid was unnecessary, a composition having taken place between Col. Espino and Don Juan Lavalle, that he had written to the General-in-chief of the Army of reserve, informing him of this event, and ordered the Commandant of the Auxiliary force to return to headquarters, in case he was in march for Santa Fé.

A letter dated Arroyo de Calchin, 25th ult., announcing a successful skirmish of 25 federal militia, Commanded by Sergeant Pedro Estevan, who had defeated 40 men, taken 30 prisoners, among them Captain Sarmiento.—The prisoners however escaped, leaving behind them their arms and horses, in consequence of the militiamen being called off to attack another enemy's party which they likewise routed.

The country in the neighbourhood of Rio Cuarto having been liberated from enemies by the result of the battle of 7th March, General Quiroga continued his march in the direction of San Luis or Rioja. Colonel Echevarria, who had decamped with Col. Pringles, returned, (as it was said,) with a few of the dispersed and proceeded to join General Paz. The latter had sent a scouring party of two to three hundred men to the South of Cordova, which, since the defeat of the 7th had remained unprotected. His E. the General-in-chief being informed of these movements, ordered Col. M. Lopez and Commandant Lira, to keep in observation upon them, and sent to attack Echevarria.

The details conclude with the following "intelligence from Entreríos."

On the 21st ult., at break of day, some firing took place between the detached parties of Col. Espino and those of Col. Felipe Rodriguez, under whose orders was Don Juan Lavalle.

After this firing Señor Espino prepared to attack the enemy, who held a good position with breastwork, their wings resting upon the Monte del Palmar.

Col. Espino in order to oblige them to quit this position, feigned a retreat, and when he found himself pursued by nearly 200 men which had been detached, he turned upon them, overthrew them, and obliged them to fall back upon Col. Rodriguez. He and Lavalle then united their forces on the other side of the Arroyo, and in this state of debility, Rodriguez entered into conferences with the Commander of the division of Corrientes, which had arrived to aid the province of Entreríos. In this interview it was arranged that Don Juan Lavalle should deliver up his arms and repass the Uruguay, and that the inhabitants who had taken part in these illegal assemblies, should be restored to their homes without fear or molestation.

The Government of Corrientes guaranteed these promises, with which the Government of Entreríos was disposed to comply; but on the night of 22nd ult., in contravention to the agreement, some got off through the wood, others by another route.—Col. Espino pursued them at day-break on the morning of 23rd., and his vanguard was coming up with Lavalle in the pass of Sandu, when he and some of his officers threw themselves into a boat, which was in readiness, (leaving behind them 130 lances, side arms, &c. &c.) and others reached an island in the river.

A letter from an officer of the National flotilla in the Uruguay, dated 30th ult. says, "Don Juan Lavalle and his officers escaped across the Uruguay on the morning of the 24th., and a narrow escape they had, as three of our boats arrived on the afternoon of the day he passed. We took off the island of St. Francisco, (about a league and half above Paysandu,) 8 men and 50 or 60 horses, taken from the Estancias in this Province. I do not think they will trouble Entreríos again in a hurry."

The above details combine all the news of the week, relative to the belligerents.

The Tyne 28, Captain Hope, has been paid her advanced wages, and will proceed to South America in a few days. Mr. Fox, recently appointed Minister Plenipotentiary from this country to Buenos Ayres, and Mr. Gore, Secretary of Legation, will take passage in her. Mr. Fox will embark at Havre de Grace.

London Paper, 17th January, 1831.

A musical performance is announced by Señor Rosquellas for Monday next, at the theatre. We have not room to insert the particulars.

The little prodigy, Luis Pablo Rosquellas, will make his second appearance before the public.

Shareholders of the Bank, in fulfilling the objects of the decree of 17th December last.

PASSION WEEK.

The usual rites were observed during the week. On "holy Thursday," the flag at the fort, marine office, &c., and those of the National and other vessels in the harbour were half-masted, yards crossed, &c.

In the afternoon and evening, the streets were thronged with females in sable dress proceeding to visit the churches, presenting a scene of no ordinary interest to the protestant stranger. Some of the churches were tastefully and splendidly decorated, particularly, that of St. Francisco, St. Domingo and the College, and we need scarcely add that all were crowded. Military music was performed as customary, drums muffled, &c.—the band left the fort about half past 8 o'clock in the evening, and "marched in measured step" across the Plaza to their barrack. The night was calm and moonlight.

Good-Friday.

Numerous congregations attended the solemn observances of the day, in the different churches.

Saturday.

At 12 o'clock the guns at the fort and from the National vessels of war were discharged, and flags run up to the mast-head, yards squared, &c.: the bells rung a "merry peal," and business was again resumed. H. I. M.'s barque San Christoval fired a salute, which was answered from the fort.

At night a number of Judasses were burned in different parts of the town, they were grotesque figures stuffed and accoutred in Guy Vaux fashion, and some of them were labelled with the names of individuals; fire works were discharged, and the streets were full of people.

Easter Sunday.

Several groups of fashionable fair were on the Alameda in the afternoon: Church costume was laid aside and they appeared clad in "virgin white," and in all the colours of the rain-bow. The lady Editor of the Argentina promised to be there in particular attire, but she came not.

Easter Monday.

Many parties made excursions to the country attracted by the fine weather and the joyous season, but there was no Greenwich hill or fair for the amusement of Cockney John Bull and his family.

H. I. M.'s barque San Christoval fired a salute at sun-rise, mid-day and sun-set, in compliment to the day.

A poetical effusion was published on Saturday last, entitled the Jews' Synagogue, or the Judas of the year 1831.—It is couched in very "sarcastic vein," and deals with unsparing severity upon some leading individuals of the unitarian party.

The heat during the week was at times oppressive. The thermometer (on Tuesday and Wednesday last, was 80 in the shade, and yet the winter is close at hand. A heavy dew has fallen on the mornings and evenings.

The columns are certainly Ionic, but neither the capitals nor the bases are copies from the capitals and bases of the Ionic order, from the Temple on the River Ilissus at Athens, there are not so many members in either capitals or bases as in the example. The establation has not the character which is agreeable to the eye, as belonging to one of the rich orders of architecture. It is generally allowed to be a defect in the Ionic establations of Athens, that the dentils are omitted as they appear almost essential to the elegance of the cornice, and I consider it a further defect in the Temple on the River Ilissus, the having only one face to the architrave the cymatium of the architrave in the church appears to have more of Roman than Grecian character, but these are trifles compared with the pedestals upon which the columns are placed, if that can be called a pedestal, which is only the die of a pedestal, without having two out of three of the essentials which constitute one, namely the base and the cornice. The placing the ceilings of the side aisles and of the altar upon a level with the tops of the capitals of the columns, thereby omitting the whole of the architrave fizeze and cornice to which those parts are fairly entitled, is a very great defect to the architectural appearance of the building. The antæ I think quite as much entitled to have some thing to stand upon as the columns, and I consider that they ought to have a base similar to the columns, at least so it is in the Temple of Erichtheus at Athens. The antæ in the Ionic order answers the same purpose as pilasters do in the Corinthian or composite orders, and are equally entitled to stand upon a level with the columns which they accompany. How would it look in the Corinthian order where the columns are standing upon pedestals, to see the pilasters so lengthened in their shafts as to reach the ground, and that without a base?

THEATRE.

The theatre was opened for the season on 3rd inst., with the tragedy of Andromache, in which Doña Matilda Diez scolded a great deal, but she is ever vixen-ish when she suspects her lover to be perjured, and "at lovers' peevishness they say Jove laughs."

We were happy to see Doña Trinidad, Señores Caceres, Casacubierta and Villarino again on the stage. The theatrical corps has become tolerably efficient, wanting, however, Felipe David, and this truant will probably find his way back some day or other.

On the 4th was performed a comedy and a farce.

On the 5th a play of the melodramatic kind, entitled the "Two Sergeants," it is full of incidents and narrow escapes, and yet, somewhat tedious.

After the play a Castanet dance was exhibited by Señora and Señor Cañete, but not with such éclat as formerly, the music was dull and, the night was sultry. A farce concluded the entertainments of the evening.

The house on this occasion was only thinly attended, except in the cazuela.

On the two previous evenings it was extremely crowded.

The orchestra now and then favoured the audience with some pretty music between the acts, including the overture to Jocunde, and la Cenerentola.

The theatre has been thoroughly cleaned, (not before it was wanted,) the lobbies and interior of the boxes white-washed and painted, and additional lights in the former. The front panels of the upper boxes and cazuela are newly papered, the colours crimson, light-blue and gold with decorations; the proscenium has likewise been under the artist's hands, and the house now looks respectable, and indeed elegant, compared with its former state.

It seems from a communication in the Universal of Montevideo, that Señor Culebras has retired from the Stage. He was always a correct actor, and was among our first remembrances of Buenos Ayres, particularly as being the person appointed to announce the performance, as was once the custom here. The boys on these occasions often annoyed him by their constant shouts of baca!ao.
