OPENING OF THE FRENCH CHAMBERS.
Speech of Louis Philippe.

The Chamber of Deputies was opened in the customary form on 5th November, by the following speech from the King—

Gentlemen, Peers and Deputies,

"I have felt the necessity of assembling you before the ordinary period of the convocation of the Chambers. The measures which the Emperor of Austria, the Queen of Russia, have taken in concert to regulate the relations between Sultan and the Pacha of Egypt have imposed serious duties upon me. I have the dignity of my country at heart, as much as its security and repose. In persevering in this moderate and conciliatory policy, which we have pursued the forty last years, I have placed France in a position to face the chances which the course of events in the East may produce. The extraordinary events which have been opened with this intention will be submitted to you, and you will appreciate the motives of them. I continue to hope that the general peace will not be disturbed. It is necessary for the common interests of Europe, the happiness of its population, and the progress of civilization. I depend upon you to assist me to maintain it, as I should rely upon you, if the honor of France, and the rank which she holds amongst nations, committed us to make new efforts.

"Peace was re-established in the north of Spain, and we congratulated ourselves on that happy result. We should see with grief that the evils of anarchy came to replace the evils of civil war, I have the most sincere interest in Spain. May the stability of Isabella II., and of the institutions which ought to sustain the throne, preserve this noble country from the long and grievous evils of revolutions!

"Not having obtained from the Argentine Republic the satisfaction which we have claimed, I have ordered that new forces should be added to the arms charged to insure respect for our rights and protection of our interests.

"Success has crowned several important expeditions in Africa, where the valor of our soldiers have been signalled. Two of my sons have partaken of their perils. Exertions are still necessary to guarantee in Algeria the safety and tranquillity of our settlements. My government will know how to accomplish what we have undertaken.

"The city of Boulogne has been the theatre of a foolish attempt, which has only served again to call forth the devotion of the National Guard, of the army, and of the population. All ambitious attempts will fail against a monarchy founded and defended by the all-powerful expression of the national will.

"The Budget Law will soon be submitted to your examination. I have prescribed the most severe economy in the establishment of the ordinary expenses. My sons have imposed upon us unexpected charges. I have the confidence that public prosperity, at its extreme pitch, will permit us to support them without affecting the state of our finances.

"The dispositions will be presented to you of public utility on behalf of literature and education.

"Gentlemen, I have never claimed with more earnestness and confidence your loyal assistance. Anarchical passions have not been discouraged by impotency. Under whatever form they may be presented, my government will find, in the existing laws, and in the firm maintenance of the public liberties, the necessary means to put them down. As for me, in the trials imposed on me by Providence, I can only be grateful for the protection which it has not ceased to throw over me, as well as my family; and to prove to France, by a never failing attention to her interests and happiness, the gratitude inspired in me by the testimonies of affection with which it surrounds me in these cruel moments."

At the portion of the speech alluding to the Eastern question, several of the deputies exclaimed, "Ours is the best lot, but desiring other demonstrations either of satisfaction or displeasure until the end, where his Majesty became deeply affected. The shouts of 'Vive le Roi!' were now loud and general, and they were terminated by a clapping of hands, in which the ladies took part.

At 2 o'clock, the carriage returned to the chateau, and we are happy to add, not only without any interruption of the public peace, but with every demonstration of respect towards the King.

The arrival in London on Friday morning of the Alexandrian mail, has brought us a confirmation of the news from Syria, communicated last week in a telegraphic despatch from Marabout. Ibrahim Pacha, (son of Mehemet), and Salim Pacha, (the renegade Frenchman, Col. Sevez) descended from the mountains, and fought a pitched battle with the Allies in the neighbourhood of Beyrut. They were totally routed; and, after having sustained a loss—killed, wounded, and deserted—of 7000 men, retreated to their fastnesses with 200 cavalry. The force of Syria is virtually annihilated by this event; and by one vigorous effort the action of the Viceroy's best power has been broken. That the result of this action will facilitate a rearrangement of European relations we should think occur, and no less so that it will effectually crush M. Thiers and his blustering party.

Private letters describing the recent attack and capture of Sidon, by Commodore Napier, have been received during the past week. It appears that the gallant Captain had remarked to the Admiral that Sidon was not in our possession, and that if he liked he would go down and take it, and he would be again in 48 hours. He accordingly started, and was as good as his word. He had the Thunderer, Wasp, Cyclops, Gorgon, and Hydra, with 800 T-rks and 500 marines. On his way down he fell in with the Steamboat, from the port, with a detachment of 250 marines, which he fought with him, and after firing shot and shell at the town for a couple of hours, he made a breach and landed at the head of his men. It was a sharp struggle, but after destroying a great number of the enemy, who neither gave nor would receive quarter they at last killed the Egyptian Commander, who died game with two marines' bayonets at his breast; his rifle and sword resisted, so they fired and killed him. His troops immediately threw down their arms to the amount of 500. One hundred and fifty were afterwards taken, and the whole two thousand were brought round to the fleet at Juno. Napier was most daring. On the top of the tower he made his way, waving his hat on the point of his sword, and clearing the men on. The loss in this gallant affair amounted to 15 marines killed and wounded; two mortally wounded. M. d'Alvy and Sienra of the Wasp, and a mate of the Revenge, and six seamen. Lord Howe, who had only just arrived from England in the Stratford, was killed in the breach. He was a gallant young officer, and had served in Spain throughout the whole of that contest, and for his conduct had secured two Spanish orders of merit.

SYRIA.

On the 10th October, an engagement took place between the allied troops and those of Ibrahim and Salim Pacha, in which the latter were completely defeated, and took to the mountains, with 200 cavalry only and two officers; 7,000 in killed, wounded, and prisoners have from the result of this engagement, fallen into the hands of the Sultan's Porte. The Emir-Kosim has been most successful, and Emir Beshir, and was with a large body of mountaineers, in pursuit of Ibrahim Pacha, who has little or no chance of escape. We are in possession of Beyrut, which was evacuated on the night of the 10th, in consequence of a disposition manifested by Admiral St-Pol and Bandiera to land troops. In order that nobody should be left, the sick were beaten out with sticks by their countrymen. About 2,000 in all, who remained outside the walls, re-entered the next morning, and surrendered themselves prisoners. General Smith has fixed his headquarters at Beyrut. On the 11th, the Emir-Beshir arrived at Sidon, and on information being given to Admiral S-Pol, he on the 12th sent two steamers to receive him, in which he embarked, and thus has finally carried his troops into execution. The camp at Djount Bay is broken up. The only vessels now remaining there are three—Admiral Walker's and two Turkish frigates, and which, with a number of about eight hundred prisoners on board, is to be sent immediately to Constantine. Commodore Napier, in the Powerful, with the steamers Gorgon and Cyclops, have united at Djount Bay to attack Tripoli. By the taking of Beyrut about twenty pieces of artillery, with ammunition and provisions, have fallen into the possession of the allied Forces. Reports of deserters from the fortress of Acre announced the impossibility of its being able to hold out, in consequence of the continual desamations, and of its present enfeebled state. Captain Berkeley, of the Thunderer, commands at Sidon, which is so well fortified as to defy the attacks of 15,000 men. The Archduke Frederick is also there. The Turkish troops have given proofs of courage, and have conducted themselves so well as to set at defiance the ill-attested reports of all enemies of the Sublime Porte as to their conduct. We never doubted their bravery, and it is one of the reasons why their chiefs that could never for a moment turn by their own inability to their young Sovereign, universally esteemed, nor could that easily happen.
