BUENOS AYRES, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1841.

[YEAR XLV.]

BUENOS AYRES.

We have no news to communicate this week from the Provinces of the Interior.

The last accounts from Montevideo, left the Riverista vessels nearly ready for a start, and their opponents under Admiral Brown at anchor close to that port, so that an encounter will in all probability soon take place. The Montevideo journals were straining every nerve to animate their naval men, and amongst other things aver that a private subscription had been entered into of ten thousand patacones to be given to that vessel of their squadron which captures Admiral Brown. A correspondent in Montevideo, requests us should we notice this offering, to append thereto the fable of "the consultation of the Mice to boll the Cat." We have not however the fable at hand.

The Montevideo papers have got up a story of a mutiny having lately taken place in Santos Lugares, wherein 300 men were killed, besides 26 officers who were shot after its suppression. We scarcely need say that, although the tale is finely told, there is not a word of truth in it.

The 2nd inst., was the anniversary of the birth day of H. M. Don Pedro II., Emperor of Brazil, upon which occasion the Brazilian brigantine of war Camaron was dressed out and fired salutes at sun-rise, 1 p. m. and sun-set. The United States schooner Enterprise, and French schooner of war Elclair, had the flag of Brazil at their fore, and at 1 o'clock saluted with 21 guns each.—All the Brazilian merchant vessels hoisted their flags and signals. At 1 o'clock a salute was fired from the Fort in honor of the day.

The Secretary to the Brazilian Legation Don Antonio José Lisboa, addressed a note under date Buenos Ayres 19th ult., to the Committee of Management of the Hospital for men, inclosing 4000 dollars currency in the name of H. E. the Privy Counsellor Louis Moutinho de Lima Alvarez y Siles, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Brazil near the Argentine government, stating that H. E. was desirous to solemnise in a suitable manner the happy day of the 2nd December, the anniversary of the birth of his Sovereign H. M. Don Pedro II., and therefore requested that on that day half the sum in question might be distributed amongst the patients in the hospital who have no other support but public charity, and the other half to be sent for distribution to the Hospital for Women.

A suitable reply under date 22nd ult., was returned by the Committee.

Mr. Mandeville, H. B. M.'s Minister Plenipotentiary, sailed on Wednesday last for Montevideo in H. B. M.'s ship Pearl. He embarked on Tuesday with Captain Frankland, and was accompanied to the place of embarkation by General Mancilla and Major Aguilera. The Pearl saluted him with 15 guns on his arrival on board. His visit to Montevideo is stated to be for the purpose of signing the treaty entered into with the government there, for the suppression of the Slave trade.

Official Documents.

The Gaceta of 27th ult., contains the details of the discussion in the House of Representatives of the Province at its sittings on 8th July last.

Treasury bills in circulation on last inst., 4,355,600 dollars.

THE WEATHER this week has been changeable and at times boisterous, with "lots" of dust—thermometer 66 to 80.

THE LATE FASHIONABLE FRAUCAS.

As the recent fashionable flare up on one of our public places of amusement, has excited a good deal of curiosity, and as there are a hundred incorrect reports relative thereto flying over the city, we have been at some pains to ascertain the facts in the case.

It appears that the parties in the affair were Emanuel A. Suidam and wife, of Georgia or Alabama, and Señor E. Alvear, son of the Minister of the Argentine Republic.

To begin at the beginning it is necessary to state that about a year since Mr. Suidam and lady came on to this city, from the South, and put up at the Astor House. Whilst there Mrs. S. attracted much attention by her appearance, and was talked of and looked at by every one. At that time Señor Alvear also boarded at the Astor. He, of course, this being a free, republican city, looked at Mrs. Suidam, the same as all others did, it is a privilege granted in our constitution that the two sexes may look at each other as much as they like. But unfortunately Mr. Suidam differs from most people, respecting this clause, and uttered in consequence sundry threats against sundry gentlemen, for not interpreting as he did. The matter then dropt, and remained in embryo, till Monday evening last.

On that evening, Señor Alvear, who by the way enjoys the reputation of being an amiable, gentlemanly person, went to this public place of amusement, accompanying a party of ladies and gentlemen, among whom were Mr. Harmony, son of Mr. Peter Harmony, Mr. Mott, son of Dr. Mott, and Mr. Wright of this city, and Mr. Coolidge of Boston. They went to witness the performances, as thousands have done before them. After "Fashionable Arrivals" were played, these gentlemen went for some refreshment. While out, Mr. Suidam came up behind Señor Alvear, unawares, and struck him one blow with his fist, and then with a large bowie knife gave two desperate thrusts, goring his face in a most shocking manner, severing an artery, and cutting his lip so that it hung completely down. The end of one of his fingers was also severed while in the act of sending off the second thrust. Blood gushed out, and splattered every person and thing around. All was instantly in a flurry, and in the midst of it Mr. S. made his way out into the street. As Señor Alvear was thought to be dangerously wounded, he was immediately taken home in a carriage, and the cut sown up. He was very severely hurt, and it is a wonder that he was not killed.

As no one present knew Suidam, even by name, Mr. Harmony rushed out, and came up with him in Prince-street. He demanded of Suidam his name, and the cause of the attack. He gave as a reason that Señor A. had been discovered taking improper liberties with Mrs. S., and stated that he had no other means of revenge, as he felt convinced, from the different positions they occupied in society, Señor Alvear would not meet him in a duel. He said also, that he intended to have killed him; that he came from the South expressly for that purpose; and that he should have attacked Alvear in Broadway, on the day previous, had not Alvear been walking with a lady at the time he met him.

Such are the facts of the attack. Now, no man was more surprised than Señor A. when he was told the cause thereof. He never took any liberties with Mrs. S., never expressed himself for or against her; always conducted himself as a gentleman should towards a lady, and is as innocent of any wrong to her as a babe unborn. This, we have been told by half a dozen gentlemen, and state it in justice to Señor A. And it also appears that Mr. Suidam was in an error, and mistook Señor A. for another person—the one who did express too much love for Mrs. S.

Señor Alvear is now confined to his bed, and some days will elapse before he recovers sufficiently from the cowardly, murderous attempt on his life, to walk out.

Mr. Suidam was arrested yesterday, and held to bail in the sum of $3,000.

The above is a plain statement of the whole affair. It has been the talk of the city since its occurrence. We give the particulars and the names of the parties in full so that no mistake may be made either here or abroad. This we consider due to all the South American nations, as well as to the parties immediately concerned.

We received by the Argentine, English papers to 1st October. They contain the following particulars of an attempt made to assassinate one of the French Princes.

Paris, Monday, September 13.—An attempt has been made to assassinate the Duke d'Aumale to day. He was at the head of his regiment, proceeding along the Faubourg St. Antoine Neully, where a grand banquet was prepared by the King and Queen for him and his comrades in arms, when a man dressed in a blouse started from a cabaret and discharged a pistol shot at him. It is said that the shot was directed at the Duke d'Aumale, because he was a little in advance of his Royal brothers; but the Dukes of Orleans, Nemours, and Montpensier, were with him, and the assassin might have aimed at the Duke of Orleans as the heir to the throne. Fortunately the shot did not take effect, but the horse of a General Vaillant was killed, and it is said that the General was slightly wounded in the knee. The assassin was about thirty years of age, and no doubt a member of the secret societies that have lately been creating disturbances in Paris, but as yet no particulars have transpired concerning him.

After a few minutes delay the march of the regiment was resumed, and it passed along the Boulevards, the Princes still maintaining their places at its head, and cheered by the people. It proceeded to Neully, and, up to the hour of writing, no account of any other disagreeable occurrence has arrived here.

Groups of low characters paraded the place du Clastet and several streets of old Paris, uttering seditious cries, on Saturday and Sunday night. Cries of "a bas Louis Philippe, a bas Guizot, we must have blood!" were heard. No other force was employed against these people but the sergents de ville, and by their side alone the mob were dispersed without a riot taking place.

The name of the assassin is Peppart.

From "The Morning Post" of 1st September.

By the private advices lately received from Buenos Ayres it is satisfactory to perceive that the interests of the British creditors of the republic have been kept constantly in view by the government of President Rosas. His Excellency Señor Moreno's despatches from London on the subject had reached the hands of the Finance Minister. The immediate departure of the packet, however, allowed for the interim: justly time to make a hasty acknowledgment of them. The details of a plan for the adjustment of the English debt, suggested by Señor Moreno and Messrs. Baring, Brothers & Co. which embraces, we believe, a proposal for liquidation by part in cash, to be realised out of the national products of the republic in the European markets, and part in Treasury bonds, secured by the custom-house, has not yet been formally entered upon; but we have good grounds for thinking that, in defiance of the still existing differences of the Argentine State with Montevideo, an honourable intimation of satisfying the claims of the English bondholders, now fourteen years in abeyance, is entertainable. With reference to the arrears of interest accruing during this period, the recommendation is, we understand, to make a deferred stock of them. The republic has a heavy internal debt. The interest upon this, under whatever circumstances the government has found itself placed, has always been punctually paid. The capital in consequence commands the high price of 65 to 70 per cent. currency. There is in this an admitted unfairness that ought not to be further persisted in. The great obstacle which has presented itself to a satisfactory adjustment of the foreign debt was found in the very adversity of the exchanges. The plan proposed by Señor Moreno, under the advice of Messrs. Baring, has accordingly been devised as perhaps the best and only one that could obviate the disadvantage. Fortunately the claims of the bondholders on Buenos Ayres are of very limited extent, the capital not exceeding a million sterling. Her case is so far different from the cases of Mexico and Columbia. With not over-abundant means at command, both these countries have borrowed so largely that to provide the requisite amount for the payment of their dividends will always make a sensible impression on their treasuries.

We learn further from these private sources of information that the affair between the republic and Montevideo was rapidly hastening to a close. Such a consummation was accelerated by the growing discontent which prevailed in Montevideo. Lavalle, it is asserted, was completely crushed, and nothing serious was now apprehended from the Unitarian faction, whose interests he had identified himself in the civil war. The known determination of the governments of both France and England, each acting upon its individual policy, tended to discourage the enterprises of those who had been hoping to accomplish the revolutionary purposes they had in view.

We received by H. B. M's brig Partridge, London papers to 8th September, Paris to 6th. The list of the New Ministry as inserted in our last appears to be correct. The Tory papers extol the new appointments, and their opponents acknowledge that the new government will be overpowering and strong as it regards the majorities it will have in both Houses of Parliament, but prognosticate that their rule will be calamitous for the country.

The 'Chester Courant' of 7th September, speaks upon the subject as follows—

"The history of empires perhaps, does not present such an example as the position of Sir Robert Peel: he may be ranked as

"The foremost man of all the world."

A distinction, he owes to his talents and honorable perseverance, and in a cause which most men would be proud to engage in. The means influence to his councils; and the government, of which he is the chief, will possess a stability and firmness not to be shaken by the rude attacks of those democratic elements, which are likely to be roused against him. He will pursue his course steadily for his country's good, and in the bonds of unity which bind the Members of the Cabinet to one common cause, the nation have the strongest assurance that the general interests will be well supported and upheld.

"The London Shipping and Mercantile Gazette," same date, says—

"The names of the Cabinet of Sir Robert Peel have been for some days before the public, and have afforded ample food for commendation, comment, and cavilling, according to the personal feelings or political bias of the parties who have been themselves to the consideration of the matter, and not according to the real merits of the case. With regard to our own opinions upon the subject, we are bound to state that having canvassed thoroughly the materials of which the present cabinet is composed, we believe that it would have been impossible to have selected from amongst the peers and commoners of whom the late opposition was composed, an administration less liable to objection, or more likely to prove a vigorous executive. Let but the principle be uniformly and judiciously based on sound, practical, and adapted to the necessities of the country, and it is our firm conviction that the Cabinet selected by the present Premier possesses all the qualifications, ability, tact, knowledge of business, determination, and influence, requisite to carry them out in measures calculated to promote the public interests and to relieve the nation from much of the difficulty that now envelops it.

"The Times" contains the particulars of the delivering up of the Seals of Office of the Whig Administration, and the handing them over to their successors. The affair took place at Clarendon, where the Queca had taken up a temporary residence, and where a guard of honor of the 71st regiment (Highlanders) where their band had been stationed. The Whigs of course arrived first, but Lord Palmerston much later than his colleagues. The Tories came afterwards, and passed their political opponents on the road—the manner in which they saluted each other it is said was dull enough. The Duke of Wellington was enthusiastically cheered by the attend ant crowd. 'The Times' gives a humorous account of the whole affair—averring, that the Whigs did not bear their fall with fortitude, but looked low spirited, haggard and miserable, especially Lord Palmerston.

Sir Robert Peel, is now regarded with extraordinary interest, from his having in a manner the fate of nations in his hands—by some he is denominated the Sovereign of his Sovereign Queen Victoria—certain it is, that that, which she formerly refused to him she has now conceded, and has dismissed the Whig ladies of her household (including the Duchess of Sutherland) and appointed Tory ladies in their places. Her husband Prince Albert has also given notice to the noblemen and gentlemen forming his establishment that they must support Sir Robert Peel's administration or resign their employments.

On Sir Robert Peel's arrival at Windsor, on a visit to the Queen, the major part of the inhabitants of that town thronged the streets through which he passed, all eager to get a glimpse of the countenance of the 'great man.' Sir Robert is added looked extremely well, and returned the salutations of the vast assemblage with great courtesy.

It is said that both Whigs and Tories were surprised at the great majority (21) of the latter had in the House of Commons. Neither party counting upon more than 70 or 80.

Lord Aberdeen, the new Secretary for Foreign Affairs, had held a levee at the Foreign-office, Downing-street, at which the Foreign Ministers attended—amongst them was Señor Morcos, the Minister from this Republic.

Amongst the new caricatures by H. Bunbury, which have appeared in London, is one representing a prancing horse as a groom trying to catch up the tail of a carriage with a sieve of corn or chaff.

And another with the same noble lord leaping into the corn-law gulf, Lord Melbourne supporting a weeping Queen. Both are clever comments on the corn law question.

CANADA.

Lord Sydenham, Governor of Canada, died at Kingston in that Province on 18th September last. His decease was hastened by a fall from his horse which produced lock jaw. The New York Weekly Herald of 25th September, in noticing his death, says—

"He was about to be removed by the Peel Ministry, but the prime minister of all things, Death himself, got ahead of Mr. Peel and the steamboats, and beat him by several weeks." Lord Sydenham, in anticipation of the defeat of the Wigt Ministry, had, some time previous to his death, resigned his post, and we learn by the late English papers that the Conservative government had appointed Sir Charles Bagot as his successor.

The newspaper states that the trial of M'Leod was about to commence, and in relation thereto states—

"The excitement which exists at present, and which has existed for some time past, along both sides of the border, and the importance in a national point of view which this case has assumed, has every where drawn public attention to its merits; and there exists at the present time, as great an anxiety in Louisiana and the South to know the result, as there does in the city of New York. It is the general belief, that let the case be disposed of in whatever manner it may be, that there will be trouble of some kind, and perhaps of a very serious character. Efforts have been making for some time past, and are now making by the various Hunters' Lodges on the borders of this State, to produce a riot some where, of some kind, in case M'Leod is not convicted. The recent stealing of powder and cannon is in fact of course connected with these movements.

"To the credit of the general government be it said, it has taken every means in its power to preserve peace and put down outbreaks of every kind. From his own seat into the disaffected districts, and General Scott has devoted his entire energies, for some time past, to this purpose.

"The result of the trial is by no means sure. There is a probability that he will be acquitted; but this cannot be calculated on for a certainty. The calm but firm position of the English government, and the equally firm and calm position of our own, taken in connection with the hostile disposition of the State government, and the both sides of the line—all forbode trouble, and that of the most serious and lasting kind. God grant both countries and all parties a safe and speedy deliverance!"
