AND ARGENTINE NEWS.

N.º 816]

BUENOS AYRES, SATURDAY, APRIL 9, 1842.

[YEAR XVI.]

BUENOS AYRES.

LETTERS from the army are to the date of the 31st ult., at the Post of the Lobaton, on the confines of Santa Fé, upon which point the whole of the divisions from the Interior have concentrated—amounting to about 8000 infantry, 4500 cavalry, and 45 pieces of artillery. An advance corps under the command of Colonel Sosa and Flores, attacked and dispersed a body of Sautequinos under Oroño, on the 27th ult., at the Desmochos (Estancia de Correa), killing some 20 of them. A few prisoners, 3000 mares, 1000 head of horned cattle, and 40 carts, besides a considerable number of families fell into the hands of the federal forces.

Don Roque J. Baudrix, Justice of Peace of the Tuyú, addressed the following note to General Corbalán, principal aide-de-camp to the Governor.

Tala de los Señores Archonena,
March 26, 1842.

The undersigned Justice of Peace and acting Commandant of the 2nd and 3rd squadron of the 5th regiment of Miñita Cavalry, intreats you will lay before H. E. Our Illustrious Restorator of the Laws Brigadier General Juan Manuel de Rosas, that he makes a donation in favor of the State of the sum of one thousand nine hundred and forty four dollars currency, being the amount of his pay as Major from the 1st of April until the 31st of December of the last year, at the rate of two hundred and sixteen dollars per month, in aid of the just war which the Heroic Defender of American Independence, the Father and Saviour of the country over whose destinies he presides, carries on against the perverse unitarian band and their infamous leaders the molato Rivera, Ferrás and Mascarrilla, enemies of God and of man, and that the undersigned is ready to make the sacrifice of his fortune and his life should it be necessary in order to aid in the destruction of the recreant unitarian band. The sum above noticed will be delivered to you by the federal citizen Don Manuel Baudrix, trusting that H. E. will be pleased to admit so trifling a demonstration of the patriotism of the undersigned.

God preserve you many years.

NOTICE FROM THE POLICE OFFICE.

As the killing of dogs will commence on Tuesday the 5th of April, it is requested that persons possessing any of those animals which they prize will keep them within doors in order to avoid complaints.

The 4th inst., was kept as a close holiday in Buenos Ayres, it being the day of La Encarnación de Nuestro Señor Jesu Cristo.

We have been a good deal amused with reading in a recent Paris journal a tale of scandal upon our sovereign lady Queen Victoria, which rendered into plain English is in tenor as follows—

Rumour avers that Queen Victoria and her spouse are not so happy together as is imagined. The Prince is a tall elegant good tempered fellow—a contrast to the Queen—who is dumphy and ill tempered, and who instead of rendering more agreeable the position in which the poor youth is placed by the laws of England—she makes it worse. She is besides as jealous as the very Devil, and at her balls she lands him a list of ugly old ladies, amongst whom he must choose his partner. She also subjects his every action to the most rigid scrutiny, so that notwithstanding the conjugal patience of the Coburgs, he can scarcely bear up against such tyranny. One evening lady Queen had a tea-party at Windsor Castle, which was attended by great Lords and noble Ladies of the Court. A good deal of tea-table chat took place, in which the Prince joined at intervals and smiled when the Queen smiled. Unfortunately a conversation began upon a brilliant performance at the Italian Opera on the preceding evening—the “green eyed monster” took possession of the Queen—she bristled up and scolded the Prince for having cast a sheep’s eye at the box in which sat the beautiful Lady S*****. The Prince however so completely exculpated himself that the Queen not only got angry at being so greatly in the wrong but was taken with a fit of the sulks. The Prince in order to mollify her, offered her a cup of tea, in his most gallant manner and accompanied with one of his best compliments; but it was useless,—she turned pettishly from him—and in the act, upset the cup, the contents of which splashed on the face of the Prince, who scolded and indignant, covered his face with his handkerchief and hurried from the room. On the following morning he loudly declared that his situation was insupportable—that he would at once lay down all his grandeur and no longer be dragged along by a chain of gold. “I have been deceived (he exclaimed) the part of husband to the Queen would do for me—I will retire—give me in preference my little German domain. England needs me no longer. The Crown possesses hers, and if it should so happen that these are not sufficient I will return and resume my conjugal duties.”

This affair (continues the audacious journalist) is much talked of in English and French society, and if the Prince has really used the language imputed to him, he will probably affect to it, because the Coburgs with all their docility are like all other Germans continually obstinate. Who knows but Victoria’s cup of tea may in after years be the subject of a drama at the Theatre not less interesting than the Duchess of Marlborough’s glass of water?

Tutor, N. No. 56, Calle de la Piedad.

BEGETS leave most respectfully to return his sincere acknowledgments for the attention and care by his respective customers and friends for the decided preference and support he has received from them during a period of seven years past, which will be ever gratefully remembered by him.

T. Tucker has been ever anxious by assiduous attention, punctuality and the completion of their orders in the best possible manner to merit their kind favors, and which has proved successful, and in consequence of a series of ill health, for several months past and his still precarious state, he has determined as soon as he can dispose of his present Stock in Trade to withdraw from the business, in the same time, to be directed the attention his health will permit; and every article will be future be charged at the lowest possible price, and made in the best manner as he is able. His regular customers will therefore excuse their accounts being not done at this time, as all accounts must be paid on the delivery of the articles ordered.

T. Tucker has on hand Black, Red, and various colored superfine cloths, various cassimeres and drills, for trousers, also clothed for the various kinds of large and small assortment of rich plain and figured satins and velvets, and a large variety of figured and plain striped muslins for use and various other articles all the best quality.

CAPTURE OF AMOY.

From the 'Canton Register,' of 21st September 1841.

Some differences of opinion have been expressed as to the manner in which Amoy was attacked, and the broadside of the two lines of battle ships—and any one who knows anything about such things, knows that they are broad in any and all senses of the word,—are said to have made little impression on the rock-like masses of granite of the Chinese defences, as they were with several feet of mud and turf. The construction of the principal forts is represented to have been so strong and massive that old and skilled officers have said that the united efforts of England's broadsides had not done it, but little impression had they been directed by men who knew the range of their guns, and knew how to defend the strength of their position.

H. M.'s Plenipotentiary's circular informs H. M.'s subjects on these points so fully that we have little more to say; various opinions have been expressed on the manner of the attack: the broadsides of powerful ships are said to have been of little effect; but immediately the marines and troops landed the men of Kowloon took to their heels, and small blains to them for the steady musk fire of a disciplined regiment what answer, what defences do the matchlocks, the arrows of China, oppose.

We shall, probably, have many anecdotes to relate of the successes of the English arms in China; and we invite attention to the following extract of a letter.

Extract of a letter from Amoy.

We got to Amoy on Wednesday evening about sunset; ran in past the islands that were fortified outside, and anchored out of gun shot of the batteries. The Chinese have not been idle, from the town to the beach running along it for one mile is a low stone fort with a 100 guns, the stone is all covered except the embrasures with mud, which gave the Alligator the idea it was only mud; beyond this there is a range of forts extending about 2 miles farther, with batteries, some of 20 guns, some of 30.—The island of Kolosso opposite the town is fortified with different batteries of heavy guns about 80—opposite, on the N. W. side of the bay, is defended with a long range of forts extending about 2 miles; these are by the tide out of range from the ships, but not when the Bionde, Druid and Modeste passed them to engage the island of Kolosso. The Chinese shot from this fort passed over our ships but ours did not reach the shore. As the light advanced, the Wellesley and Blenheim ran along the whole line of forts about 400 yards from the shore and 500 or 600 from the batteries; these did not fire, although the Chinese gave it them pretty briskly, cutting away a good deal of their rigging, but doing no other material harm. The 2 line of battle ships then anchored by the stern, commenced firing, and soon knocked over the few batteries made of stucco, but as to the stone ones we made but little impression from their immense thickness except now and then turning over some guns and opening one or two small breaches, although the firing every now and then was admirable. You will hardly believe that the Chinese stood to their guns to the last, and only started when the soldiers entered the fort at the outside angle and the marines at the other. One mandarin who I had watched all the time walked quietly down to the beach and drowned himself; the other cut his throat as he saw our men in possession of the batteries.

The Chinese, men, women and children, ran behind-skelter over the hills leaving every thing broken.

We are now only waiting to proceed to Chusan and Ningpo, as we have a N.E. wind.

The troops are all embarked and ready. We sail at daylight on the 31th, leaving 500 men on the island of Kolosso—Druid, Pyralis and Algour; which we hold all the business is settled.

When the Chinese were asked to ransom the city, no mandarins being there, they said we might destroy it if we liked, they had no power of giving money, but that they would put themselves under the protection of the English if we would protect them. The plenipotentiary is on board the Blenheim.

From the 'Gazetteer Star.'

LORD AND LADY PONSONBY.

An address, of which the following is a translation, has been presented by the Greek and Armenian families and British subjects residing at Therapia, to Lord and Lady Ponsonby—

Therapia, September 15, 1841.

'To His Excellency Lord Ponsonby, Ambassador from the Queen of England, and to his Noble Lady.

'My Lord and my Lady—A most honorable but painful duty has been confided to me. It is that of conveying to your Excellency's feet the address of the village of Therapia.

'Impressed with the deepest gratitude, its inhabitants, through a report of your departure, had alarmed, wished to doubt its veracity, but they that the sorrowful truth is known, nothing remains for them but to deplore their separation from benefactors who will be the object of their constant prayers.

'Our men bless you, and our women will teach their children never to forget you in the prayers which they will address to the Almighty, of whose beneficence you have been the generous representative.

'Virtuous without pride, charitable without ostentation, you have succored the widow and protected the orphan. All misfortunes, which have made known to you, have alike found solace in your bounty.

'This was a noble employment of your fortune. The recompense of Heaven will be your just reward.

'Lord Ponsonby is indebted to his birth for the exalted station which he holds in society, and to his eminent talents for the distinguished functions wherewith he has been charged by his Sovereign; but your Excellencies are indebted to your virtues alone for the universal sympathies that you have awakened among us.

'May you enjoy the pure satisfaction that the good derives from acts of goodness. May this satisfaction be your constant lot. It will strew flowers over the remaining days which the Almighty may accord to you.

'Too deeply affected to be able to continue, your Excellencies will easily comprehend the emotion of him who thus expresses the farewell of those of whose misfortunes he has so often been the interpreter.

'He has the honor to be, &c. &c.

(Signed) 'J. D. DE NOARY.'

'We certify that the sentiments expressed by M. de Noary are those of the Greek and Armenian families, of the chiefs of the village, and of the British Majesty's subjects residing in Therapia.

(Signed) 'NICHOLAS HADJI CHERAZI, 'ALEXANDER SEFOUS, 'GEORGIO ANASTASIOU.'

'Lord and Lady Ponsonby may receive many addresses and letters expressive of regret at their departure, but none ought to gratify them more than the above proof of attachment on the part of the people among whom they have resided nearly ten years. It is by conduct such as that depicted by M. de Neary, that representatives of governments in foreign countries compare the esteem of the great, with the affections of the poor, and elevate the character of their country."

Lord and Lady Posenby and suite, landed in Buenos Ayres on the 15th September 1836, from H. B. M.'s ship Ranger, Captain Lord Henry Thynne, and left it on the 31st July 1838, in H. B. M.'s ship Thetis, Captain A. B. Bingham, in company with H. B. M.'s ship Sapphire, Captain Henry Dundas, and H. B. M.'s ship Heron, Captain the Hon. Frederick Grey.

His Lordship resided in this City as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary from the government of Great Britain to that of the Republic, during the period above mentioned. Lady Posenby was at that time a charming woman, with expressive "tell tale" eyes. She mingled freely with society here, and was a constant attendant at the Theatre or Opera nights, for at that time we had operas every week, a contrast to the horrid dulness, from D. Longinos which now pervades the Theatre of Buenos Ayres.

PORTIEN VESSELS OF WAR.

FRENCH. Brig Tastique, 4 guns, Captain Le Comte Pierre Benjamin Doria Pouget.
UNITED STATES. Corvette Decatur, 16 guns, Captain Henry W. Ogden.

The urbanity and unassuming manners (so characteristic of true nobility) of Lord and Lady Posenby delighted all who had the happiness of knowing them.

The following extract relative to the Duke of Wellington, as he appeared on the day of the passage of the Douro, by the British army in May 1809, is from the interesting work entitled "Charles O'Malley, the Irish Dragon."

When I arrived at head-quarters, I was dreadfully fatigued and heated; but resolving not to rest till I had delivered my despatches, I hastened towards the Convent of La Sierra, where I was told the commander-in-chief was.

As I came into the court of the convent, filled with general officers and people of staff, I was turning to ask how I should proceed, when Hixley caught my eye.

"Well, O'Malley, what brings you here?"

"Despatches from General Murray."

"Indeed! oh, follow me."

He hurried me rapidly through the buzzing crowd, and ascending a large gloomy stair introduced me into a room, where about a dozen persons in uniform were writing at a long table.

"Captain Gordon," said he, addressing one of them, "despatches requiring immediate perusal have just been brought by this officer."

Before the sentence was finished the door opened, and a short, slight man, in a gray undress coat, with a white cravat and a cocked hat, entered. The dead silence that ensued was not necessary to assure me that he was one in authority; the look of command, his bold, stern features presented; the sharp piercing eyes; the compressed lip; the impressive expression of the whole face, told plainly that he was one who held equally himself and others in mastery.

"Send General Sherbroke here," said he to a side-de-camp. "Let the light brigade march into position," and then turning suddenly to me, "do your despatches are these?"

"General Murray's, sir."

I needed no more than that look to assure me that this was he of whom I had heard so much, and of whom the world was still to hear so much more.

He opened them quickly, and, glancing his eye across the contents, crushed the paper in his hand. Just as he did so, a spot of blood upon the envelope attracted his attention.

"How's this! are you wounded?"

"No, sir; my horse was killed."

"Very well, sir; join your brigade. But stay, I shall have orders for you. Well Waters, what news?"

This question was addressed to an officer in a staff uniform, who entered at the moment, followed by the short and bulky figure of a monk, his shaven crown and large cassock strongly contrasting with the gorgeous glitter of the costumes around him.

"I say, who have we here?"

"The Prior of Amaranst, sir," replied Waters, "who has just come over. We have already, by his aid, secured three large barges—"

"Let the artillery take up position in the convent at once," said Sir Arthur, interrupting. "The boats will be brought round to the small creek beneath the orchard. You, sir," turning to me, "will convey to General Murray—but you appear weak— You, Gordon, will desire Murray to effect a crossing at Avintas with the German and the 14th. Sherbroke's division will occupy the Villa Nuova. What number of men can that seminary take?"

"From three to four hundred, sir. The padre mentions that all the vigilance of the enemy is limited to the river below the town."

"I perceive it," was the short reply of Sir Arthur, as placing his hands carelessly behind his back, he walked towards the window, and looked out upon the river.

All was still as death in the conical; not a lip murmured, the feeling of respect for him whose presence we were standing, checked every thought of utterance, while the stupendous gravity of the events before us, engrossed every mind and occupied every heart. I was standing near the window; the effect of my fall had stunned me for a time, but I was gradually recovering, and watched with a thrilling heart the scene before me. Great and almighty as was my interest in what was passing without, it was nothing compared with what I felt as I looked at him upon whom our destiny was then hanging. I had ample time to scan his features and canvass every lineament. Never before did I look upon such perfect impassibility: the cold determined expression was crossed by no show of passion or impatience. All was rigid and motionless, and, whatever might have been the workings of the spirit within, certainly no external sign betrayed them; and yet what a moment for him must that have been! Before him, separated by a deep and rapid river, lay the conquering legions of France, led on by one second alone to him, whose very name had been the prestige of victory. Unprovided with every regular means of transport, in the broad glare of day, in open defiance of their serried ranks and thundering artillery, he dared the deed. What must have been his confidence in the soldiers he commanded! what must have been his reliance upon his own genius! As such thoughts rushed through my mind, the door opened and an officer came hastily, and, whispering a few words to Colonel Waters, left the room.

"One boat is already brought up to the crossing-place, and entirely concealed by the wall of the orchard."

"Let the men cross," was the brief reply.

No other word was spoken as, turning from the window, he closed his telescope, and, followed by all the others descended to the court-yard.

This simple order was enough; an officer, with a company of the Buffs, embarked, and thus began the passage of the Douro.

So engrossed was I in my vigilant observation of our leader, that I would gladly have remained at the convent, when I received an order to join my brigade, to which a detachment of artillery was already proceeding.

Rubini's triumph at Madrid has been equal to those enjoyed by this great singer in most of the other capitals he has visited,—greater it could not be. His singing in the last act of Lucia is described by private letters as exciting acclamations never heard within the walls of a theatre in Madrid before. It is hoped that he will renew his engagement for six nights longer.

The studied disrespect of the mass of revolutionaries who assemble in the theatre to her Majesty, who was present at his first appearance, is the theme of indignant comment in nearly every letter. One, from an Englishman, which we have seen, contains the following passage:—

"Rubini is if possible greater and in better voice than I ever heard him either in London or Paris, but my delight is only nothing of his conduct or loyalty, manifested by the radical caudillo, who crowded the pit, towards their charming young queen, the royal Isabella, who was present in her box, and expressed her delight with all the spontaneous grace of childhood. The well-benighted denizens of the parterre, who, sooth to say, look the dirtiest of the human race, made it a point to keep their hats on, while they gazed rudely in the face of their infant sovereign. Al! my dear Sir, for loyalty and true gallantry commend me, after all, to old England. I could not help wishing to see some of these outstarched dons try such an experiment at Covent Garden or Drury Lane, in the presence of our own royal Victoria; by the powers, as Paddy says, if they did, they would learn a lesson of manners that would last them the term of their natural lives. Rubini is the great Duke d'Ussan, one of the richest dukes in Europe, not of getting the graces of Bedford and Northumberland. Think of a fortune like this in Spain. Rubini, though felt here beyond all precedent, is said to be desirous of going back to Paris, being somewhat disturbed by the accounts sent him of the ill-luck of his successors of the young tenor, Mr. Cendia, and the known inconstancy of the Parisians."—Galignani's Messenger.

Warm, Warner, Warmest.—A house with a wife is often warmer enough; a house with a wife and her mother is rather warmer than any spot on the known globe; a house with two mothers-in-law is so excessively hot, that it can be likened to no place on earth at all, but one must go lower for a simile.—Morning Herald.

From "A Run through the United States, during the Autumn of 1840. By Lieut. Col. A. M. Maxwell, K. H."

"I again repeat," says the gallant and good-humoured Colonel (for about the fiftieth time in the course of his pleasant tour of returns), "I again repeat, and you must bear with the repetition, that a more agreeable, charming, communicative people I have never met with than the Americans."

Don't look with French grimace or kissing Italians, but have a little patience with them, be civil and unassuming, and they will soon find yourself well received and comfortable. I grant there is a little shyness about their first manner; but that wears off, and gives place to friendly communication and good fellowship. Also, I will again repeat the assertion, that I have never seen a beuger nor a drunken man, and I have never beheld a rude or forward action."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE BRITISH PACKET.
AUTUMN.

LOVELY Autumn spreads her wings,
Joyful of her teeming Earth,
While glad nature cheerful sings,
And echo's to the sound of mirth;
Now the dew-bespangled mead
Glitters in its gaudy dress,
And the foliage as we tread
Blossoms in festal loveliness.
Serenely pour the breezes blow
O'er the fertile level plain,
Health displays her ruddy glow,
And smiles upon the skyvan reign.
Shower us of irrigating rain,
Fill the lakes and swell the stream,
Charming all the boundless plain,
Gladdening as a blissful dream.
Home the teeming harvest hies,
Natures grandest work is done,
Shouts of triumph ring the skies.
The prize, the golden prize is won.
Sweetly now the fruit and flowers,
Swells the choir with jocund lay,
Onward rolls the rosy hours,
And bursts into a perfect day.
Blessings pour on every side,
And nature more displays his smile,
And with open heart and pride
Receives the tribute of his toil.
Hope in full fruition glows,
Smiling in its golden light,
Then sinks in gloom and night.
