BUENOS AYRES.

WRIT this number concludes the quarter of the British Packet.

Colonel Mariano Maza, arrived in town on Tuesday last, bringing the official account of the complete defeat of the forces of Lopez de Santa Fé, on the 20th, at San Pedro, about 9 leagues to the north of the capital of that Province, on the borders of the Chaco. It appears that Lopez was drawn into the action by a stratagem of General Oribe, and discovered his error when too late to avoid the encounter—the results of the affair amounted to be 200 killed and 250 prisoners, there was also captured 15,000 horses, 30,000 head of cattle, 4 pieces of artillery, baggage, &c.—of the 2000 men carried into action by Lopez, some 1200 to 1300 almost at the first charge passed over to the ranks of the Federal army.—Lopez himself, accompanied by two adjutants, had effected his escape to an island in the Paraná.

It appears that a partial affair had taken place on the 16th, four days previous to the principal action, at the Barranca near Coronda—which obliged Lopez to fall back on Santa Fé.

We understand that the Head-Quarters of the army of the Confederation were at Coronda. It consists of more than 10,000 effective men of the three arms, under the orders of Generals Oribe, Pacheco, and Echagüe—a small body under Col. Santa Coloma had occupied the city of Santa Fé.

The news was first announced to the public by a discharge of rockets from the Police-office—shortly afterwards a salute of 21 guns was fired from the Fort and from each of the vessels of Admiral Brown's squadron, infantry were drawn up and fired feu de joie, the bells of the Churches rang merry peals, and the town was decorated with flags. In the evening it was illuminated, music paraded the streets amid vias, &c., and rockets were continually streaming in the air. The flag decorations in the town were continued on the 27th—the heavy rain at night prevented a repetition of the illumination as also the intended celebratory performance at the Theatre.

The Rev. John Armstrong, preached his farewell Sermon at the British Episcopal Church on the morning of Sunday the 17th inst. And on Sunday morning last, the Rev. Barton Lodge delivered his first discourse at the English Church. The congregation on both occasions was very numerous.

The Rev. John Armstrong has quitted Buenos Ayres, for ever. He embarked on Monday last, in the 12-oared launch of the United States Corvette Decatur, accompanied by Miss Mackinlay, and proceeded on board H. B. M's packet Cockatrice, which sailed the same evening.—A crowd of friends attended their worthy Pastor to the place of embarkation. The Rev. Gentlemen, we believe, intend to visit the United States and Canada on his way to England.

The same packet conveyed hence also for ever another highly respected individual—Mrs. Hynes. This amiable lady, and the very useful Seminary of which she was the Mistress for nearly 22 years, whereby she diffused our language amongst many of the native youth of Buenos Ayres, of both sexes, will not easily be forgotten, nor will she speedily forget Buenos Ayres even amid all the charms of her native Devon.

Mrs. Hynes was accompanied to the place of embarkation by several friends. We could not witness her departure unmoved, for she was one of the earliest of our acquaintances in Buenos Ayres, and one for whom we ever entertained the highest respect and esteem. It is her intention to make a short stay at Rio Janeiro and then proceed with her two daughters to England.

From the Salem Register, February 14 1842.

Remains of the Steamer President.

We learn from Captain Jepson, of the schooner Nokims, from the Cape de Verd Islands, that the stern boat of the ill-fated steamer President, and also several water-casks, bearing her name, had been picked up and carried into St. Nicholas, one of the said Islands. Captain Jepson did not himself see these interesting relics, (as he sailed from another Island, Bouavista), but was assured of the fact by a respectable english gentleman who had seen them.—The latitude and longitude where they were picked up, we are unable to state. The boat, as well as the water-casks, had the name "President" upon it. This is the first trace which has yet been discovered of the wreck of that noble steamer.

The Cape de Verdes are situated about N. lat. 16, and W. lon. 23. If the casks and boat were picked up any where in that vicinity, they must have drifted a great distance from the place where the steamer foundered; which indeed was to be expected. It is generally supposed that she went down during the gale which occurred on the second or third day after her departure from this port.

In connexion with the above, we publish the following, from the log-book of the brig Portland, Captain Mount, of Baltimore, which arrived here a few days since from Smyrna.

July 21, 11 A. M., lat. 40 21' N., long. 39 16' W., from New York for Smyrna, passed a large piece of wreck, sixty feet long, thirty to forty wide; and looked like the broad-side of a steamer. It appeared to be part of the main channel, having four dead eyes, with turned mouldings and long flat iron straps. Her hull was black, with a broad white streak, and large painted black ports. There was a bit of a hauser over a piece of wood, apparently part of the guards."

We are told by two persons who have been often on board the President, that this is a correct description of the paintings, &c. [New York Commercial Advertiser.]

In our last we could only insert one document from the Gazette of 22nd inst. The following is a summary of the rest.

Despatches from Generals Oribe, Echagüe, Pacheco, Colonel Flores, &c., giving an account of successes of the federal troops in Santa Fé, the particulars of which we have before published.

A proclamation dated Cordova, February 1, 1842, addressed to the Santaferinos from Colonel Jacinto Andrade, denouncing Governor Juan Pablo Lopez as a corrupt traitor coward, in league with the odious unitarian mutineer Juan of the 1st December 1828, José María Paz, and the rest of that infamous band—that a powerful army under the command of the renowned warriors Oribe and Pacheco was in march for the protection of the Santaferinos, &c. &c.

Farewell addresses from General Pacheco to the inhabitants of the Provinces of Mendoza and San Juan, on his quitting their territory with the division of the army under his command.

Details of various donations to the government of Buenos Ayres, in aid of the war against the unitarians.

A proposition to the government dated Buenos Ayres 13th inst., from Don Manuel J. Garcia, for the construction of a mole to the port of Buenos Ayres, to which the government replied under date 12th inst., that it had referred the matter for the consideration of the House of Representatives.

Replies to the letters of the Brazileiro Monarquistas, which appeared in the Rio Janeiro Jornal de Commercio.

Communications dated in December and January last, from the government of Bolivia (of which Don José Ballivián is President) to the government of Buenos Ayres, relative to the late invasion of the Bolivian territory by the Peruvian troops under the command of President Gamarrá—their defeat and the measures which the government of Bolivia had been forced to adopt in invading Peru, &c., in order to obtain therefrom indemnity for the past and security for the future. Adding, that the Bolivian Cabinet had been and was constantly animated with the best sentiments towards that of the Argentine Confederation, and felt most anxious to draw closer the ties of friendship which at present exist between the two nations.

Don Felipe Arana, Minister for Foreign Affairs of the government of Buenos Ayres, in his replies to the above dated Buenos Ayres 18th inst., stated that his government felt the most sincere friendship towards that of Bolivia, and deeply regretted as it does the prosperity which ought to be the portion of the American States, and proferring its good offices to bring about a reconciliation.

A despatch to Governor Rosas from General Urquiza, Governor of Entrerios, giving an account of the ejection of the unitarian forces from that Province, the particulars of which we have before published.

A communication to Governor Rosas dated Jujuy, January 1, 1842, from Don José María Huarte, Governor of that Province, annexing a decree same date, for the reprobation of the government of Buenos Ayres, inasmuch as, for the present and until the General Government of the Republic adjust definitive treaties of commerce with the neighbouring States, all merchandise imported to Jujuy from Cochabá or the interior of Bolivia, shall pay 20 per cent upon its valuation.

Don Juan Manuel de Rosas, Governor of Buenos Ayres, replied to the above under date Buenos Ayres 16th inst., approving the measure adopted by the Governor of Jujuy, until the Minister Plenipotentiary which the government of Buenos Ayres would send to that of Bolivia, adjusts a definitive treaty of friendship, commerce and limits with that Republic.

A circular dated Jujuy 1st January, inclosing a copy of the decree above mentioned, to the governments of the Provinces of Salta, Tucumán, Catamarca, Rioja and Mendoza.

Several leading articles, one of which speaks at considerable length on the miseries inflicted upon Society and States by the machinations of Secret Clubs or Societies.

Atestado de Gendra.

Tucuman, January 24, 1842.

SERAP. J. DE ARANGO.

Argentine brig of war General Belgrano, of Montevideo, 1842 to 1842.

The Commander in Chief of the Squadron,

To H. E. the Delegate Governor of the Province, Dr. Don Felipe Arana.

Excellent Sir,

The undersigned Commander in Chief of the Squadron of the Argentine Confederation, has the honor to inform Y. E., that the enemy's squadron of the odious unitarians, consisting of a corvette and two barges, remains at anchor off St. Island on the inside of said island, sheltered in the bottom of the harbour of Montevideo, without their having made the least movement since the 11th ult., when we arrived and anchored at the entrance of this port.

The undersigned sincerely regrets that the enemy's vessels have not ventured to leave their strong hold, as in that case he would have had the grateful satisfaction of communicating to Y. E. a new triumph of the Argentine flag on the waters of the Plata; it must however afford infinite pleasure to the true Federal Argentines, friends of Our Illustrious Restorator and of the Confederation, that there is no enemy to dispute with the Argentine Republic the dominion of the waters of their river.

I trust that Y. E. will be pleased to lay before H. E. Our Illustrious Restorator of the Laws Brigadier General Juan Manuel de Rosas, the contents of this note.

God preserve Y. E. many years.

WILLIAM BROWN.

In the Gaceta of 22nd, were also Odos and Sonnets, addressed to Generals Oribe, Pacheco and Echagüe, and the army under the command of the former, and a copy of the verses composed by Dr. Don Vicente Lopez, Member of the Chamber of Justice, and spoken at the amateur performance at the Victoria Theatre on the 13th inst., in celebration of the anniversary of the institution of General Rosas as Governor of the Province.

The first stone of the New Royal Exchange, in London, was laid on the 17th January last, by Prince Albert.

The subjoined is from 'The Spectator,' of 22nd January.

The grand event of the week has not been of a political kind, except in that broad sense of the term which relates to all things that concern the conduct of civilized people. The first stone of the Royal Exchange has been laid by the Consort of the Queen; who by his presence did homage to the wealth and power of that commercial nation which has adopted him for one of its most favoured sons. Every thing was auspicious. The sun shone forth, as the planets would say, for that day only—almost eclipsing the gas-lights in the grand pavilion; the scene was enlivened by the presence and acclamations of crowds of spectators, yet no cross accident occurred; the procession effected its march and counter-march with all the triumph and less of the vicissitude of the gallant Major Sturgeon's march to Ealing; the flags slipped up and down the staff above the pavilion with decorous smoothness, as if conscious that England that day expected every thing to do its duty; the foundation stone "fitted to a P"; and Prince Albert proved so masterly a hand at the trowel, spreading the mortar in such gaily style, that the people were amazed, and were forced to give vent to their feelings in cheer.

Then there was Mr. Prie's feat at the Mansion-house, all magnificence, luxury, and good feeling. The Queen's Husband and the City Magistrate were the Damon and Pythias of the evening; the Hero of a hundred fights sat beside the Quakers whose name is throughout Europe a synonyme for charity—the lion with the lamb; Sir Robert Peel and Lord John Russell frouted one another, knife and fork, not sword, in hand. The Prince was, as the saying is, the cynosure of neighbouring eyes—with his high rank, his field-marshal's uniform, his comely aspect, and engaging manner. His health was drunk with an "enthusiasm" that did credit to the wine and turtle; and he returned a pretty little speech of general praise, assuring his fellow-citizens that he would not rest at home. Of course he does: what respectable man, living two years in the most comfortable house, with a charming young wife, a rising family, good shooting, and the general esteem, could feel otherwise than in London? We need not, on occasion, Lord Stanley condensed his energies in a neat lecture on the beauty of "things as they are" in the House of Commons, party strife and all; and still more aptly, the President of the Board of Trade, uttered a recitation of "The boat's row":—even before the ladies had retired Lord Ripon began to take the unfiled Exchange for "a boating"—whence it may be inferred how gaily all things danced on the wave of hilarity.

Under such auspicious airs the new "temple of exchange" as Sir Robert Peel calls it, abode and type of the greatest commerce in the world. It is a curious coincidence that it so arises, when that commerce is in a state of greater depression and jeopardy than it has ever been in since the war was the greatest in the world. It is to be hoped that the emen may be fulfilled; and that, as a palace will arise from the stone which Prince Albert tapped so cabalistically twelve times with a mason's mallet, the structure of British commerce will arise from the measures for which Sir Robert Peel has been tapping his forehead these five months.

After this exordium the journalist enters fully into detail upon the subject, from which we make the following extract—

Mr. R. L. Jones handed to Prince Albert a trowel, silver-gilt, magnificently worked and adorned. On one side were the Royal arms and supporters, with an inscription referring to the use to which the trowel was applied; and on the other side, the coat of arms of the West, out of the building, with the three shields of arms of the Mercers Company, the City of London, and Sir Thomas Gresham. The Prince took the trowel and spread some mortar along the surface of the under stone. The redlines and corlarks were now linked with which the Prince executed this part of the business seemed to astonish the company, who gave vent to their feelings in a round of cheers.

The upper stone was next lowered, by means of machinery fixed outside of the pavilion, slowly and accurately into its proper position, a mallet was now handed to Prince Albert. It was formed of a block of beautiful oak, presented by the chairman, and was part of one of the great beams of the old Exchange. It was the full size of a mason's mallet, turned and moulded into an elegant form, with a wreath of oak-leaves and acorns carved round the base of it, and the Royal crown terminating the handle. There was a silver plate inserted at the end, with a similar inscription to that on the trowel. The back of each of the mallets was made of lead, being actually burnt through in the form which the mallet was to assume, so that the stain had extended almost through its substance, although it appeared to be as hard as the most solid metal. With the mallet the Prince struck the stone twelve times, twice at each corner; and then with a level and plumb-line he proved the stone to have been correctly placed. The Rev. Henry Thomas, the Lord Mayor's chaplain, delivered a prayer, and "God save the Queen" was sung by some of the members of the Sacred Harmonic Society, Exeter Hall; and the children belonging to the Charity-School of Broad Street Ward joining in chorus.

Prince Albert and the Lord Mayor having bowed to each other, the procession formed anew, and retired in the same order as it entered, amidst the loudest acclamations; which were prolonged by "one cheer more for Sir Robert Peel." The whole of the proceedings occupied about an hour's time.

Two models of the New Exchange, which were exhibited in the pavilion, excited general admiration.

The Egyptian Hall was the scene of the banquet at the Mansion House in the evening. It was fitted up with gorgeous splendour. The throne canopy prepared for the Queen on her visit to the City was placed behind the chair. The Hall glittered with gold and silver plate; and the entire company appeared in Court dresses. The music gallery was filled with ladies; a temporary gallery having been erected for the musicians.—"Poetry," such as some educated bellman might have indited, was expressly composed for the occasion, and fitted by Mr. Wilson to popular music. Wilson himself singing the principal parts. Prince Albert, dressed in the Field Marshal's uniform, entered with the Lord Mayor at five o'clock; and they were followed by the Earl of Haddington leading the Lady Mayores, the Duke of Wellington Mrs. H. Melville, and Sir Robert Peel Mrs. Fry. Among the guests were the Ministers, several great lawyers, the dignitaries of the Corporation and most eminent citizens, the City Members, (including Lord John Russell,) Lord Dudley Stuart, Miss Fry, Mrs. Poligon, and Mrs. Somes.

The cloth removed, the health of the Queen was given and drunk with the usual honours; followed by that of Queen Adelaide. The Lord Mayor then proposed "Health and every happiness to his Royal Highness Prince Albert."

The Prince replied—

"My Lord Mayor, Ladies, and Gentlemen, I return my most sincere thanks for this toast, and beg to express to you my lively satisfaction at the kind and flattering manner in which you have received me. It must ever be a gratifying recollection to me to have, by a trifling act of mine, connected my name with the erection of that important building of which we have laid the first stone to-day—an edifice which it may truly be said that it will become the heart of the commerce of this great country, and in which I feel myself attached by the dearest ties—a country in which I daily feel myself more at home—a country whose kindness I daily more appreciate. Again thanking you for the honour you have done me, I beg to propose "The health of the Lord Mayor, whose guest I am this day, and the Corporation of the City of London."

"The Prince of Wales and the Royal Family," "The Bishop of London and the Church," "The Army and Navy," having been disposed of, the Lord Mayor gave, "Long life, health, and happiness, to the Right Honorable Sir Robert Peel, and the rest of her Majesty's Ministers." The toast was received with loud cheers.

Inspired by the occasion and the presence of Mrs. Fry, who sat on his right, Sir Robert, in returning thanks, effused a little prose poetry—

"It was most gratifying to us to have the opportunity of witnessing the important ceremony of this day. It was impossible not to feel that that contracted spot on which we stood is again destined to be, as it has been before, the centre of attraction to which the commerce of the world will gravitate. It was impossible not to feel that it was the spot to which the traffickers of all nations will resort, where they will obliterate national antipathies and national jealousies, and will form those engagements which constitute new guarantees for the general tranquility of the world. Gentlemen, my Royal Highness this day has laid the foundation, not merely of an edifice dedicated to commerce—he has laid the foundation of a temple of peace; and it is the earnest wish of her Majesty's government that the future progress and destiny of that temple may correspond with the favourable auspices under which this day its foundations have been laid."

Mr. Gregory, the Conservative Candidate, has been elected Member of Parliament for the City of Dublin, by a large majority. "The Spectator" above quoted, in speaking of the affair, says—

Mr. Gregory has issued a printed address, and has addressed the electors in person. In his printed address he affects to consider that he has no real competitor. He avows himself "a firm and uncompromising supporter of our Protestant institutions," and a staunch supporter of Ministers. He adds—

"I am opposed to the scheme of the late Ministry respecting the Corn-laws, as not only calculated to compromise our national independence, but as peculiarly detrimental to the best interests of this portion of our United Kingdom; and as regards the Reform of the Union, I understand the Vote by Ballot, and such other wild speculations, I need scarcely say that I could never countenance them."

As a specimen of Lord Morpeth's antagonism, we quote a passage in his spoken address, his maiden speech, delivered on Monday night, in an "overflowing meeting" at the rooms of the Metropolitan Conservative Association in Dublin, and received with great applause.

In the event of being chosen the representative of the City of Dublin, of which he had no doubt, it would be his first object to support the present government, not because it was the present government, but because he conscientiously believed it would prove itself to be an honest government—because he was convinced it was fully prepared to carry out every useful measure with energy and wisdom—because he knew it was composed of men who would not be borne from their course in order to gain the transient shout of popular applause—because it was composed of men who would not seek by a weak or vacillating policy to give the Government of these countries whose hostility they had already possessed. Had he any suspicion of the present government, he owed too much to the memory of one whose name he bore—he owed too much to the memory of him who for twenty years of political service had proved himself to be a thorough and staunch Conservative, to countenance and support any but a firm, a resolute, and a conscientious Ministry.

H. E. the Governor Don Juan Manuel de Rosas, accompanied by three military officers and attended by an orderly, passed the Alameda on Saturday afternoon last, on horseback, on his way to his country residence the Quinta de Palermo.

VICTORIA THEATRE.

On the 34th inst., was performed Una noche de mascarar and a farce.

We did not attend.

On 28th, Lasarano e el Mudo, and a farce.

This performance being in celebration of the recent triumph of Nationalism, the National Anthem was sung. We are told that the house was only thinly attended, and that Colonel Mariano Alza, was amongst the company in the boxes.

Mr. Ducrow, the celebrated English equestrian, died lately in London, aged 54. He never recovered the shock he received from the destruction of his Theatre (Astley's) by fire.

A WIFE.—When a man of sense comes to marry, it is a companion that he wants, not an artist. It is not merely a creature that can paint and play, and sing and dance, it is a being who can comfort and judge, and discourse and discriminate, can assist him in his affairs, lighten his sorrows, purify his joys, strengthen his principles and educate his children. Such is the woman who is fit for a mother and the mistress of a family. A woman of the former description occasionally figures in the drawing-room, but attracts the admiration of the company, but she is entirely unfit for a helpmate to a man, and to train up a child in the way he should go.
