BUENOS AYRES.

☞ With the last number concludes the quarter of the British Packet.

Bulletins Nos. 19, 20, 21, 22 and 23 of the Confederate Army, which have been published in the daily papers, contain several interesting details relative to the progress of the liberating arms in the country, and lists of the numerous deserters who every day come over from the town. The remnants of the force of Flores and Estivao, routed by Gen. Servando Gomez on the 27th September, were overtaken by General Angel Nuñez on the 13th ult., and completely cut to pieces. This same General achieved two other victories over Riverista detachments on the 20th, and among the captured correspondence the following letters from Mrs. Rivera to her husband were found. We have given them a rather free translation:—

“Montevideo, Oct. 2, 1843.

“My dear Rivera—

“Since I received yours of the 10th ult., I have not since had a letter from you. You may readily conceive my anxiety. The Government had a letter of yours to Fortunato dated the 15th from the Cordoves, and this is the last news. People here in Montevideo and particularly the Government have been sadly disappointed with respect to Brazil, for Brazil has recognised Rosas's blockade; and it is said that the Minister here is going away. You can form no idea of the impression this has made on the minds of people here. They consider every thing lost. Three days ago every one was plunged in grief and preparing to set out for Rio Janeiro or elsewhere. But now they are somewhat more tranquillised, for last night news arrived of Crespin Velasquez having been defeated near Colonia—that is to say that he suffered something—but they have had to magnify the importance of this event in order to give people some courage. To-day we have news that Col. Flores, the Chilean, had dispersed Servando near the bar of the Yi, and that you were in the Fraile Muerto waiting for the junction of a Corentino force. At least I have been told that this intelligence has been received to-day. I have heard that they are only waiting here for Don Fortunato to bring 1200 men in order to make a general sally, for they have no other alternative left. The hides which our compadre Martinez brought to Almeida have been embargoed by the Government, (1) for they say they are in want of money. So that if nothing is got, which I believe will be the case, I do not know how we are to subsist; for beef is 6 dollars the arroba, and the thousand dollars I brought with me (2) are all done. And if any misfortune happens here, as everybody prognosticates there will, I do not know what they are to do. So as I have nothing flattering to tell you, I will reserve some other intelligence for another occasion. I sent by Doroteo the things you asked for, and now forward the stirrups. The family is all well—Bernardita has just risen from the bed in which she has been confined for 22 days. They had to lance her cheek—she is now better—All send you expressions of regard—Pablito a thousand kisses, and your loving wife, who longs to hear from you and to see you, her affectionate love.

“Bernardina de Rivera.”

(1) These hides were sent by Rivera from Maldonado, in an English vessel, for his own private account.

(2) From Maldonado when she went to visit Rivera in the steamer, at the time he was stated to be ill.

“Montevideo, Oct. 4, 1843.

“My dear Rivera—

“The day before yesterday I wrote to you, and I now do so again, in order that you may know that we are all well, and I as anxious as ever to hear from you. Estivao writes to his wife to tell me that you have written to him on the 24th from Fraile Muerto, and that you were well; but nothing will satisfy me till I receive a line from yourself. They tell me that your letter to Flores which he has sent to the Minister of War is in your own hand writing, but as I have not seen the latter for more than a month * * * * * Last night I was rather indisposed for I was told that D. Manuel Felix and his family had been all lost by shipwreck. As they lived in the house and I was much attached to them, I was greatly affected. Within the last few days poor Da. Mercedes Somalo, General Martinez's mistress, died. You know what a large family they had. I will not, however, dwell longer on this, but tell you that the greater part of the families here are preparing to leave the country, for the distress is very great, there being absolutely no means of subsistence. Our poor compadre Neves is one so circumstanced. In short, nothing is heard here but lamentations, as you may well imagine after 8 months' siege. The 1000 dollars I brought with me are concluded, and I have no hopes from Almeida. I already wrote to you that the Government had embargoed the hides, alleging that they had no money. Almeida will acquaint you with the particulars. The enclosed letters have been strongly recommended to my care. Receive the expressions of the tender regard of all the family, a thousand kisses from Pablito, and all the love of your affectionate wife who longs to see and embrace you,

One of the enclosures to which Mrs. Rivera alludes is an anonymous letter, ascribed to a personage who formerly held a responsible situation in Montevideo. He bitterly complains of the ingratitude of the men whom Rivera has placed in power, particularly the Minister of War, who, not content with arrogating to himself an undue share of credit to the disparagement of his patron, is accused of wishing, in conjunction with Paz and his followers, to raise a party of their own. In order to thwart the design, the writer advises Frutos to send for the Minister, upon some pretext or other, and make him learn to acquire by actual service in the field a right to aspire to the honour he covets. The intrigues of which Montevideo is the focus are made quite comprehensible to Rivera's understanding, by happy allusions to the tricks resorted to by professed gamblers at cards—and from the graphic manner in which they are described, one might imagine that the writer is as great an adept as the person addressed.

On the 31st ult., Paz and his Swiss guard, comprising nearly all the garrison of Montevideo, made a sally from the town, apparently for the purpose of making an attack on the line of the besiegers. But this was merely a ruse, the real object being to conceal a marauding expedition directed against the defenceless port of the Bucoo. The following details of this enterprise are translated from a letter written on the spot by the gentleman who fills the offices of Collector of the Custom House and Captain of the Port:—

“The only news I have to tell you is that on coming early this morning from head quarters, I found guests here in the shape of 600 infantry and cavalry belonging to the ruthless Unitarians in Montevideo, who had come by stealth, to visit this Custom House. But the only result they achieved was to rob some things, for they were so frightened that they did not even open my desk where I had money. They set fire to the beds, but did not succeed in burning the building; the sheds, however, were destroyed. The papers of all the vessels were saved, and even a number of encomiendas escaped unscathed; for the marauders precipitately retreated on seeing one of our battalions advance, and had not more than a quarter of an hour to devote to the work of devastation. They have taken away the flag from this office, and my spy glass, which will doubtless be the theme for great vaunting in Montevideo. I fear likewise that a young officer of the Echague, who was on shore, has fallen prisoner, as he has not since been heard of. The enemy left here two officers and one private killed, who fell by the well directed shots of a few men from Peñurra, who came up on the first alarm. The Ayudant of the Port of Buenos Ayres and Lieut. Alagoray were on shore at the time, and embarked in my felucca. The former was one of the greatest sufferers, for he lost his mattress and his guitar. The armed launch Arroyo Grande was in the harbour, and fired some shots, which kept the enemy at a respectable distance from the beach. The private dwellings, without distinction of those of natives or foreigners, suffered all the injury that these Vandals in their dastardly hurry could inflict.”

The celebration of Divine Service at the British Episcopal Church on Sunday last, in the form ordained by the German Evangelical Church, was attended by a numerous congregation, both of Germans and other strangers. The Rev. A. L. Siegel delivered a most impressive discourse upon the occasion.

The British brig Tallentine, sailed from Liverpool on the 2nd September, for Buenos Ayres.

The report of a misunderstanding between England and France is, we rejoice to hear, totally void of foundation. It originated in Montevideo, that hot-bed of lies, and was promulgated for a particular purpose.

It is stated that early in the month of September last, H. M. Queen Victoria embarked on the new Royal Yatch, and attended by a squadron of ‘men-of-war,’ proceeded down channel. It is added that when off the coast of France, between Calais and Boulogne, her Majesty was visited on board the yatch by H. M. Louis Philippe, King of the French, who happened to be at a watering place on that part of the coast when the squadron bearing the Royal freight appeared, and that Queen Victoria accompanied the French King on shore, and remained there for some hours.

H. B. M's. packet Crane, from Falmouth 8th September, arrived at Bahia about 13th ult., on her way to Rio Janeiro, with mails for the River Plate. We believe she does not bring any news of importance. One of her passengers from England, Captain Allan Gardner, R.N., arrived in town on Wednesday last. He came by way of Bahia and Montevideo, having left the Crane at the former port.

JOHN DANNETT,
ONLY SON OF THE
Rev. Thomas Dannett,
AND ANN, HIS WIFE, FORMERLY
Ann Ogden,

of Liverpool, in the County Palatine of Lancaster, in England, when about 22 years of age volunteered on board a privateer, then about to leave Liverpool on a cruise, and did leave Liverpool accordingly, and appears to have been at Montevideo in 1807, and again in 1809, when a letter was received from the said JOHN DANNETT, in which letter he mentions having been extremely ill and having been left in the Hospital at Montevideo in much distress, and to have been pressed into the Spanish Service as a Soldier at Montevideo, and it further appears that he was a private Soldier in the Royal Army of Spain, and that his release from that service was procured.

In the year 1812 he was seen in the neighbourhood of Montevideo riding as a Post Boy or Guide. It is believed that in 1819 the said JOHN DANNETT was then a Soldier with General Artigas, in the interior of the Montevideo Territory.

And whereas by a decree of the High Court of Chancery made in a cause of Boydell and others against Golithy and others, and Boydell and others against Stanton and others—It was ordered, amongst other things, that it should be referred to ANDREW HENRY LYNCH, Esquire, one of the MASTERS of the said Court, to enquire and state to the Court who are the parties now entitled, and for what interests and by what instruments and acts in the law to the third part of a moiety of the Freehold and Copyhold Estates of JOHN GILDART by his will devised to SARAH OGDEN; and it is UNDER the enquiries so directed by the said Decree important to ascertain if the said JOHN DANNETT made a Will or ever married, and if so, whether he left any lawful issue, his HEIR at Law being entitled to his share in the Freehold and Copyhold Estates of the said JOHN GILDART. Therefore, any person, or persons, deriving under such will (if any), or claiming to be such heir at law, as aforesaid, is, or are, by or their Solicitors, on, or before the TWENTIETH DAY of JANUARY, 1844, to come in and prove such claim or respective claims before the said MASTER, at his Chambers in Southampton Buildings, Chancery Lane, London, or in default thereof, such persons will be peremptorily excluded the benefit of the said Decree.

WILT THOU WEEP WHEN I'M GONE?

Wilt thou weep when I'm gone, dearest sister, I'd ask thee,
Wilt thou weep when I leave this storm-beaten shore;
When I'm low in the grave, when the white shroud wraps me,
Wilt thou weep o'er thy brother, when he is no more?
When life is extinct, and its visions have passed me,
And my soul from earth's thralldom to heaven shall soar;
When death has fast fetter'd those arms that would clasp thee,
To shelter my sister, should sorrow's clouds lower;
When no more scenes of childhood we can tell of together,
Nor recall the past joys when from cares we were free;
Or name the wild flowers we pull'd but to wither,
Apt emblems, dear sister, of thee and of me.
And should'st thou e'er visit the grave my form's laid in,
And thy fancy pourtray the dark silent abode,
Think not on those follies, my memory upbraiding,
But think of my soul, then at rest with its God.
'Tis but folly to weep, yet 'tis harsh for to chide thee,
For I own it is nature, 'tis affection's pure spring;
And who for that feeling, but fools would deride thee,
What bosoms are void of the impassion'd frail string?
I ask not that tear, that would grieve thy fond bosom,
Nor rob thee of pleasures on earth you'd reverse;
But the tear of kind pity, by sweet memory chosen,
Is the tear I'd sou-rit of thee, sister dear.

Among the numerous arrivals of coasters lately, produce laden, from the Uruguay and Parana, are, the Paraguay schooners Concepcion and Asuncion, from Paraguay 12th September. They carried the flag of Paraguay and were deeply laden with yerba, &c.

The sailings hence to the above-mentioned rivers, have also been very numerous of late.

The hull, masts, yards, and other appurtenances of the American brig Arcturus, stranded in the gale of last month, are advertised to be sold by public auction on Monday next.

The schooners Dominga and Concepcion (late Sardinian and Brazilian) are now under the flag of this Republic.

The Brazilian schooner Sarah, has not arrived at this port, as stated by mistake in a former number.

SALUTES.

The French brig of war Dassas, saluted the town with 21 guns on Saturday last. The United States schooner Enterprize, with the same number on Monday, and the Portuguese brigantine of war Tamega, with the same number on Wednesday, to all of which the fort immediately replied by an equal number of guns.

FESTIVAL OF OUR LADY OF THE ROSARY.

This festival was observed with the usual solemnities at the church of Santo Domingo, which was magnificently decorated on the occasion. The Novena commenced on the 30th September and concluded on the 8th ult. The attendance on each evening was numerous, considering the very unfavourable state of the weather.

The Mayordomos of the festival were, the Señoras Doña Mercedes Fuentes de Rosas and Doña Agustina Rosas de Mancilla.

The Mayordomos—Señores Simon R. Mier and José Lopez Seco.

The Preachers—The Rev. Francisco Majeste and Friar Correa.

The 1st inst., "All Saints' Day," was kept as a close holiday in Buenos Ayres.

ARGENTINE THEATRE.

On Tuesday was performed to an overflowing house, for the benefit of the new actress, Vicente Molina, a play in five acts, called Los dos Renegados! It related to a lady who had two sweet-hearts—one a Jew, the other a Christian—she preferred the Jew, upon which the Christian swain denounced his rival to the Inquisition—the Jew was condemned to the stake, but pardoned on condition that he became a Christian. The rejected lover now professed himself to be a Jew, thinking thereby to obtain the lady's favor, but she scorned him the more, and in the end he was punished with death for having changed his religion, and for having attempted the life of his rival.

After the play the Beneficiada danced the 'Solo Ingles.'

The Victoria Theatre is undergoing repair, the late rains having penetrated the roof.

Among the astonishing as well as useful inventions of the present age, we would call public attention to that of the Daguerreotype Photoeyenic Drawing, or the process by which natural objects may be made to delineate themselves without the aid of the artist's pencil. We have seen some specimens by this process, taken by Mr. Elliot, at No. 56, Nueva Recoba, in Plaza Victoria, which, we must do him the credit to say, are really surprising, as well for their beauty in execution as for the correct resemblance which it is impossible to fail in obtaining. The art of Photography or Photogeny, as it is called, is, indeed, as great a step in the fine arts, as the steam engine was in the mechanical, and we have no doubt that in time it will take the highest rank among the inventions of the present age. This art took its rise in France—M. Daguerre, who devoted his whole attention, and after fifteen years of abhorious research, gave to the world—in July, 1839, an invention with which his name will be indissolubly associated and for which he receives a pension for life of ten thousand francs a year from the French government. The details of its history would be too lengthy for our columns, but how great must be the benefits it will confer on the public. How limited is our present knowledge of the architectural ornaments of other nations—of the ruined grandeur of former ages—of the gigantic ranges of the Himalayas and the Andes—and of the lakes, rivers, vallies, cataracts, and volcanoes, which exist throughout the world. We know them only through the sketches of hurried visitors, tricked up with false and ridiculous illustrations, which are equal mockeries of nature and of art. But when the Photographer has prepared his faithful tablet, and "held his mirror up to nature," she is taken captive in all her sublimity and beauty, and faithful images of her grandest, her loveliest, and minutest features, are transferred to her most distant worshippers.

In considering the relations of Photography to the art of portrait painting, we are disposed to give it a still higher rank. Could we now see in Photogenic light and shadow, the heroes and sages of ancient times, they would thus have been embalmed with more than Egyptian skill, and the forms of life and beauty, the real incarnations of living man would have replaced the hideous fragments of princely mortality scarcely saved from corruption.

But even in the narrower, though not less hallowed sphere of affections, where the magic names of kindred and home are inscribed, what a deep interest do the realities of Photography excite. In the forms of his offspring which link infancy with manhood, the parent will discover the traces of his own mortality, and in the successive phases which mark the sunset of life, the child, in its turn, will read the lesson that his pilgrimage too has a period which must close. Nor are these delineations interesting only for their minute accuracy. They are instinct with associations vivid and endearing. The picture is connected with its prototype by sensibilities peculiarly touching—it was the very light which radiated from his brow—the identical gleam which lighted up his eye—the hue which hung upon his cheek, that painted the cherished image and fixed themselves for ever there. It would be almost an insult to our readers, to dwell longer on the utility of this new art. We have already seen its advantages in giving the most faithful representations of persons and objects, and we would recommend our friends, to not neglect the opportunity to call on Mr. Elliot and

"Fix their shadow ere the substance fades."

WHAT IS LIFE?

Our life is nought but toil and strife,
In Infancy, Youth, and Age,
While discontent, with our state in life,
Await us in every stage.

With despondency we cast our eye
On the road that lies before,
And we oft remember, with a sigh,
The joys that are no more.

To school the little urchin goes,
Torn from his childish toys,
And now he tastes his earliest woes,
Which embitter all his joys.

At length he's freed from school-boy rules,
Restraint he henceforth scorns,
Thinks that may do for plodding fools,
But he resolves to roam.

The tears they struggle in his eye,
As he leaves his native shore;
And he remembers, with a sigh,
The days that are no more.

Care comes, the happy dreams are fled
That led him on to roam;
Where can he compensation find
For the joys he left at home?

His romantic thoughts have given place
To realities of truth,
And nought can his heart replace
The golden dreams of youth.

Then, is not youth the prime of life,
The height of all our joy?
Oh! no, e'en then, with care, 'tis rife,
Which all its bliss destroy.

As time is flowing swiftly by,
We less and less comforts see,
And we regret, with many a sigh,
The careless days of infancy.

So reach we thus our latter end,
Worn out with toil and strife,
And wishing we could but renew
Our short, but mis-spent life.

PHILO POIESIS.

We see by the Montevideo papers that the Riverista Government are again striving to "raise the wind," on the security of their moiety of the pledged revenue for 1844; but we apprehend the gulls will be found now rather scarce.

Pacheco y Obes has improved upon his blood thirsty decree, after the execution of the unfortunate Don Luis Baena. Any man or woman now caught holding correspondence, even of the most innocent nature, with individuals residing within the jurisdiction of the besieging army, is to be immediately shot, whatever may be the extenuating circumstances attending the case.
