BUENOS AYRES.

The following may be relied on as the correct particulars of the scandalous outrage which we mentioned in our last as having been perpetrated by Capt. Voorhees, of the U. S. frigate Congress, against the vessels of the Argentine Squadron off Montevideo.

Early in the morning of the 29th ult., an armed pilot boat schooner, bearing the Oriental flag, was seen standing out from the shore; upon which, the Argentine vessels, suspecting her to be one of Garibaldi's craft, placed themselves in readiness to act according to circumstances. This suspicion was, however, soon removed by the confidence with which she approached till within a short distance of the Argentine corvette "25th of May," when she anchored. A boat was immediately sent from the corvette to bring the commander on board, when it was ascertained that she was the Oriental schooner of war "Sancala," one of the small vessels lately armed by the legal President for the purpose of protecting the commerce of the Buseo against the piratical depredations of Garibaldi. It was also learnt that on her way out she had taken several fishing boats; and had pursued another so close that it escaped only by taking refuge on board a merchant barque in the harbour. The Commander of the "Sancala" having delivered some dispatches from President Oribe, of which he was the bearer, returned to his vessel, which immediately got under way to return to the Buseo. Shortly afterwards it was observed that the barque in the harbour which had given refuge to the fishing boat—and which it has subsequently been ascertained is the Rosalva, having on board the well known Silas Burroughs, owner of the ship "Herald" which was seized sometime ago by the Argentine Squadron, for sailing without papers, and the perfect legality of which proceeding has been fully acknowledged by the Government of the U. S.—having hoisted the American flag and sent a boat on board the U. S. frigate "Congress," the latter had manned her boats and dispatched them in pursuit of the "Sancala," which they boarded, and hauling down the Oriental flag hoisted in its stead the American ensign and pennant; the Oriental commander and crew being sent prisoners on board of the "Congress." About this time the Argentine schooner of war "9th of July," which had been cruising during the morning, was returning to her anchorage; and when within half gun shot of the American brig of war "Bainbridge," the "Sancala," now transformed into an American vessel of war, and which had taken up a position near the latter, ordered the "9th of July" to send a boat on board, which demand being complied with, the officers and crew were made prisoners, and American boats were manned and dispatched to take possession of the "9th of July," which was easily effected, as no hostile intention was suspected. Simultaneously with this extraordinary transaction, the U. S. frigate "Congress" got under weigh, and coming close alongside the Argentine corvette "25th of May," fired a gun, and ordered Capt. Fitton to strike his flag, which, of course, the latter refused to do, requesting at the same time to be informed of the cause of such an abrupt and singular proceeding. Capt. Voorhees, however, declined giving any explanations; but leaving the "25th of May" made sail towards the Argentine brigantine of war "Republicano," which happened to be under weigh, and coming up with her sent his boats on board to take possession, which was as easily accomplished as in the case of the "9th of July"—the officers in both instances being sent on board the frigate, after having been obliged to surrender the keys of the magazines and arm-chests. Whilst this was going on Captain Fitton sent a boat with an officer on board the "Congress," again begging to be acquainted with the cause of these astounding acts of hostility, but the request was utterly disregarded, and the officer and crew of the boat made prisoners. After the "Republicano" had been secured, the "Congress" returned alongside the "25th of May," when Captain Voorhees again summoned Captain Fitton to strike, which the latter again peremptorily refused to do unless forcibly compelled; whereupon the "Congress" fired a shot over the "25th of May," and, Captain Fitton, regarding resistance as useless, from the immense disparity of force, fired another shot and hauled down his colours. Upon this Captain Voorhees dispatched his first Lieutenant, with two boats, to take possession of the "25th of May," which was done in the same manner as in the case of the two other Argentine vessels. Captain Fitton was immediately sent on board of the "Congress," when Captain Voorhees deigned, for the first time, to explain the motive of his outrageous proceedings, which was the allegation that some of the musket shots fired by the Oriental armed schooner "Sancala," in pursuit of the fishing boat, had struck the American merchant barque "Rosalva." Captain Fitton then informed him—what the fact of the flag ought sufficiently to have indicated—that the "Sancala" did not belong to the Argentine naval forces accidentally under his command, and that he had never seen her before that morning; but that he understood she was one of the craft armed by the legal Government for the protection of neutral vessels trading to the port of the Buseo. After this declaration, Capt. Voorhees, perceiving that he had been a little hasty, signified to Capt. Fitton and his officers that they were at liberty to return to their respective vessels and hoist their flags; but Capt. Fitton, energetically protesting against the gross insult that had been offered to the flag of the Republic, refused to hoist it again, without ample reparation, or before receiving orders from his Government. The Argentine officers, however, returned to their vessels, when it was found that six seamen, foreigners by birth, who had voluntarily entered the service after receiving a large bounty, had been taken from the "Republicano," and that all the fishermen prisoners had been set at liberty. Capt. Fitton then drew up in writing the protest he had verbally made, to which Capt.

Voorhees returned an answer no less curious than laconic, also in writing, stating that he was ready "to respect the Argentine forces and belligerent rights as long as they respected the American forces and "neutral rights"—just as if they had ever disregarded them, and had not, on the contrary, carried that respect to a degree unprecedented in the annals of maritime warfare!

Such was the state of things when Commodore Toll, the new Commander of the Argentine squadron off Montevideo, arrived; and this officer, without waiting, we believe, for fresh instructions, ordered the vessels to resume their colours, Captain Pinedo succeeding Captain Fitton in the command of the "25th of May." Commodore Toll immediately notified to the neutral naval Commanders the re-establishment of the blockade that had been momentarily suspended through an abuse of force as ignoble as it is outrageous. At the date of the last advices the "Sancala" with her Commander and crew was still detained by the "Congress" under pretence that no papers were found on board of her—just as if it were customary or necessary for small armed craft to carry papers when not going beyond the waters of the country to which they belong, or as if there were any difficulty in the way of ascertaining the fact whether her Commander bears, as he states, a commission from President Oribe! Really Captain Voorhees's inconsistency is only equalled by his overbearing contempt of international right. But, more of this anon.

We regret to learn by the last advices from Brazil, that fresh disturbances had broken out at Pernambuco, and obliged the Imperial Government to send a considerable reinforcement of troops to that quarter. In the meantime it is satisfactory to know that all the efforts of the factionists and foreign speculators to involve the Empire in a dispute with this Republic have proved abortive. Paz, the late Chief of the Montevideo rebels, having been denied his passports for Rio Grande, in his alleged character of an Argentine or Oriental General, he was supplied by Vasquez with credentials as Minister to Paraguay; but, he was not more successful in this new quality, the subterfuge being too apparent. Upon this he was advised by his circle to have recourse to the desperate measure of attempting his escape, for which purpose a passport under a fictitious name was procured. Having adopted this counsel, in order the better to carry the design into execution he signified his intention of visiting the gun-powder manufactory of the Estrella, some fifteen leagues' distance from Rio; and no objection being made to this excursion, he abused the indulgence extended to him by taking to flight. The Government, however, took the promptest measures in order to prevent the full accomplishment of his project; and having called at Santa Catalina, he was there detained by the President of the Province, in virtue of orders previously received from the Court; and in

MR. FENKEL, Surgeon Dentist of the cities of New York, Rio de Janeiro & Montevideo, and unanimously received by the Hon. Tribunal of Medicine of this Capital as Professor of said Art, has fixed his residence for a number of years in Buenos Ayres, and continues to practice his profession and can be consulted at all hours at his house.

He fills decayed teeth with pure gold, silver or mineral cement without pain, even the largest cavities and renders them useful for life. He evens, cleans, separates and extracts teeth by a new method, causing less pain; also inserts without pain the mineral incorruptible teeth that never decay like those taken from dead bodies. The following preparations for the teeth, which he has spent several years in perfecting, can always be had with directions at his rooms.—
EL AGUA DE LAS PAMPAS, (PAMPA WATER) distilled from herbs and roots, is a powerful stimulant to the secretions of the mouth, removing every thing of a greasy nature, the bad effects of decayed teeth, medicine, tobacco, segars and a feverish state of the mouth in the morning; it also preserves the teeth, hardens the gums when they are white and spongy, and leaves a delicious flavour in the mouth.

EL BALSAMO DE LOS ANDES, or Chemical Water, which loosens the tartar that forms upon the teeth causing the gums to be inflamed, loosening the teeth so that they often fall out—a general complaint in this country; it is a powerful astringent to gums, and makes the teeth firmer in their sockets.

FIRE KING'S REMEDY FOR THE TOOTHACHE is wonderful in its effects as thousands can testify, and the secret is known by him alone in S. A.

TOOTH POWDER, which cleans and preserves the teeth and gives the gums a very healthy colour, is too well known in Buenos Ayres to need recommendation here. He invites the curious to call and examine his instruments.

To the Editor of the "British Packet,"

Sir,

The following effusion was penned by a very young lady at the moment of reading the advertisement in your paper of two gentlemen wanting wives, to which it was meant as a reply, you will therefore greatly oblige a friend and subscriber by inserting them.

LINES TO A LOVER.

Lovely genius, who can'st thou be,
 We hear thy gentle and melodious voice,
 Keep me not in suspense—art thou he!
 Oh! what a sight! Oh! what a farce!

Method I see him; here, here he comes,
 Come hither stranger, thou shalt be my love,
 Rich or poor, 'tis all the same to me,
 But am I not too good for thee!

Alas! poor fool, unhappy messenger!
 To beg for food, which thou can'st not obtain.
 A fox to be the shepherd of a treasure!
 Away with you—return to your domain.

Unknown from whence ye come, or whither [you go,
 I close my rhyme, and bid thee adieu!
 Know for the future, whether higher or low,
 We are to wise and old for you.

GENERAL ROSAS

AND THE EVENTS OF THE RIO DE LA PLATA.

The Gaceta has replied at some length to the allegations contained in this publication. In one part of this reply it says:

"It is a very disagreeable task to analyse productions where falsehood and absurdity vie with each other, without a single colouring of picturesque fancy to interrupt the monotony of the drama.

"It is related that 30,000 souls have gone to seek an asylum in distant lands," flying from sanguinary rigours. This falsehood, despicable for its impudence, is advanced by the author absolutely without any evidence whatever, as are the rest; and then these same are invoked in order to prove others. No such emigration has left this country, nor is it unknown that a great number of the three or four thousand individuals who did seek an asylum in Bolivia, in Chili, and in Brazil, have returned. How many emigrants are there on the entrenchments of Montevideo! The personages addressed may obtain information in this respect from their own authorities in the Rio de la Plata: they do not amount to one hundred! Three hundred follow Rivera. To this are the supposed "30,000 souls" reduced; and the fact is public and beyond all doubt. On the other hand the augmentation of the population and the advancement of the country are evident. The Province of Buenos Ayres has extended its territory and settlements to the Desert; and its capital has increased in this administration the number of its inhabitants. Without having recourse, in order to demonstrate it, to the notoriety of the fact, or to the considerable augmentation of the imports from Europe, and of the exports from the country, as we have already related, it is sufficient to notice the statements of the movement of the population, and the entries and departures by sea and land that are published monthly in the newspapers. It is seen by them that the increase in 1843, averages one month with another, eight hundred persons; and in 1843, one thousand. In July last it amounted to two thousand two hundred and forty three individuals; all which gives, in less than two years, an increase of 16,843 souls to the country. We may observe by the statistical returns published in the journals, that, in the hottest period of the war, this movement if it was not in so great progression, kept always advancing. And to this should be added the increase of population resulting in this capital from the greater number of births than deaths, independently of the evident augmentation in the county districts. In the latter also new productions have been created, different establishments that were wanting formed, and good and commodious buildings raised in the towns. On the former occasion we have shown the rise and increase, in the administration of General Rosas, of one of those productions—the valuable one of the breeding of Merino sheep.

"Those are not the signs of a people 'decimated' or 'seated on sepulchres'; and it is necessary to agree that the charge of the alleged 30,000 emigrants is the greatest absurdity that calumny could devise.

"In the same tables of blood these ridiculous and revolting numbers are inscribed:—

"Died by poison .....	4
" by cutting the throat .....	3,765
" by shooting .....	1,397
" by the pignard .....	722
" in battle .....	14,920
And by various persecutions, including executions for desertion and for attempts to desert. ....	1,600
	22,405"

"The Noble Earl of Aberdeen and the Pastors of the United Kingdom may easily perceive, in regard to the number of 14,920 killed in battle, and certainly exaggerated, that it implies an accusation against all governments at war. On the other hand, the authors and protractors of the war, who, in the River Plate, are the ruthless Unitarians aided by foreign intervention, are responsible for all the bloodshed, devastations and calamities that the war produces; and must answer to God and humanity for that ferocious barbarity employed in order to uphold an unjustifiable rebellion, and subject the land of their birth to bondage and misery. "Accursed the man who brings to his country a foreign yoke!" We owe to the personages addressed by the "British resident" the justice of believing that that would be their imprecation against any of their fellow-subjects who would commit such an infamous crime; and they partook in that national fervour which animated England in the last twenty-one years' war when it smothered rebellion in the blood of the traitors leagued with the foreigner.

"There is, therefore, a reduction by no means insignificant in the revolting and false chronicle: a great deal of humanity, forsooth, and not a little hardihood to make an appeal respecting 14,920 victims of the injustice, of the cruelty and barbarity of the ruthless Unitarians! Let them answer to God and to man why they have spilled that blood with foreign bayonets. From the very publicity of their crime there is no subterfuge or protestation that can avail them."

And in conclusion it says:—

"Thus far does the 'British resident' reach in his contemptible falsehoods; but we would leave these observations incomplete did we not also examine his "Appendix." It consists of some abominable fabrications copied from the defunct Britannia and from the Nacional of Montevideo. It is a speculative description of the system of General Rosas, ascribing to him a constant action upon all that is wicked with a view to render it subservient to his political designs. Adopting this premise the "British resident" deduces that "murder, rapine and oppression are not the bases of his system, but some of the many evils which grow out of it." Reflecting upon this absurd assumption, the proof of which will be forthcoming for ages, it would be inferred that, "the basis of the system" of the ruthless Unitarians being diametrically opposed to that of the "system" of General Rosas, there should result from the former only prodigious good. The melancholy reality of the atrocities committed by those men in Montevideo and all its campaign, of the horrible ravages and bloody crimes they have at all times perpetrated, is an evident proof that the extravagant theory of their apology fall to the ground. And, pursuing the same argument, it is seen that the system of General Rosas, being repressive of those profoundly "wicked" acts, cannot but be essentially good. Thus established the theory, let us review the facts, testimonies the least equivocal. The accusations of the "British resident" are founded only on false assumptions. "Religion, he says, in its form and abstract sense, has been profaned, perverted and superseded by the idolatrous worship of a vain image. The terms 'holy,' 'blessed,' are bestowed on the 'Confederation.' The painted picture of the Dictator is set for adoration and the people are taught by the apostate priests to disregard their duty to their Creator and to put their trust in the ephemeral power of a man." The graveness with which these assertions are advanced is only equalled by their egregious falsehood and malignity. The painted picture of General Rosas has never been adored, neither in the technical exception of this word in a religious sense, nor by the more ample application of those demonstrations that Europe has dedicated to its good sovereigns or fortunate warriors. Though civilized people have been lavish in their marks of reverence to their great men, and though Religion blesses the demonstrations of public gratitude in all Catholic countries, as it is the promoter and sublime companion of the national glories, the Argentine people have restrained their effusions through respect for the principles and the wish of the very same illustrious citizen whom they have wished and wish to honour. Occasionally, in the great triumphs of the Confederation, they have carried the portrait of General Rosas in their arms, with civic love, with patriotic enthusiasm, but without personal adoration. Far from that portrait having been adored, it has been laid at the foot of the holy altars. The Government itself, whose supreme Chief is General Rosas, has prohibited every demonstration towards his person, at the same time that there is no prohibition as regards that of other illustrious men, or eminent Orientals and Argentines. With the same disinterestedness and modesty has General Rosas invariably declined all the honourable titles and valuable rewards that with eager emulation have been earnestly pressed upon him by all the Provinces of the Argentine Confederation. He has made the most noble application of the emblems of civil and military glory. The sword that he wore in the important and glorious expedition to the Deserts of the South in 1833 and 1834, and with which he struck down the hydra of anarchy in 1838, conquering the ruthless Unitarian insurgents, no longer belongs to him; he laid it at the foot of the altars of the Most High in the church of San Serapio Martyr, in the Azul, a town and church founded by himself, as a humble offering of gratitude to the Almighty. The valuable medal of brilliants which was voted to him by the Legislature of Buenos Ayres is destined to shine on the breast of our holy patron, St. Martin, in the solemnities of his festival. Are these the sacrifices that the barbarous "British resident" denounces? When the Chief Magistrate of a State gives those examples of faith and religious piety in the fairest and most fortunate stage of his career, when there is nothing wanting to his resplendent glory, his traducers should look for subjects of accusation less ridiculous, or less barbarous. Fortunately too for this country, so infamously outraged by immoral and ferocious foreigners or by the impious ruthless Unitarians, the clergy of Buenos Ayres, composed of exemplary Ministers, and guided by an enlightened and virtuous Pastor, is by a continued series of virtues, exempt from the infamous stigma cast upon it by a vagabond calling himself an Englishman, who comes out of a goal to assume the character of a politician. Of this class of pestilential intriguers there are some Englishmen in Montevideo and Buenos Ayres, whom the merchants of their own country would with reason, consider themselves disgraced even in saluting. Those are the dealers in such disreputable fabrications that tend to render abhorrent the English name! The ignorance of the "British resident" is equal to his effrontery. "Holy" is the cause of the Confederation termed, for this is denominated, when it is deemed necessary, the just cause of an independent people, not that any one impiously arrogates to himself the attributes of the Divinity, but because as the sovereign rights of nations emanate from God, according to all Public Writers, they are in this acception holy. Lord Grenville called the cause of England against the National Convention of France "holy"; and "holy" did the Greeks denominate their cause, patronised by England and France, against the Ottoman Empire. Public Writers also declare that treaties are "holy"; and the slightest observation of the diplomatic documents of the times will teach with how much frequency "the sanctity of treaties" or of "public faith" is invoked. The Confederation reposes on a solemn treaty, a glorious monument of the first administration of General Rosas; and in this regard its cause is likewise holy. It is also false that the entrance to the churches is denied or any outrage offered to those who do not carry the Federal device.

No magistrate in Buenos Ayres dare pass a sentence, says the 'British resident,' "without consulting his (General Rosas's) will." "No tribunal" he adds, "dare decide a cause otherwise than by his command. No appeal to a public tribunal may be listened to, no advocate may plead, no evidence may be produced but such as have received the previous sanction and direction of Rosas." There is more fabrications than words in these generalisms. Justice is administered in this country, as is public, by an independent, upright and enlightened Magistracy. Their sentences are published in the newspapers. Neither the Government nor General Rosas ever interfere in their decisions. There is no example of his having recommended to the Magistrates a single affair, as was a corrupt practice in the previous administrations. Advocates exercise their profession, and undertake the defences, or plead the cases of the clients whose retainer they chose to accept. It is also false that the institutions of charity and education have disappeared; the government fomented and favours them in as far as the preferent attentions of the public defence will allow. It has not abolished them, as the "British resident" supposes; on the contrary it liberally contributes to their augmentation. During the French blockade which exhausted the Public Treasury, whose principal revenue is derived from the customs, it could not appropriate the necessary funds for the maintenance of those establishments, and the cruel war of the ruthless Unitarians leagued with foreigners is the only cause why the Government has not given a great impulse and extension to the establishments of charity and education.

"Who are, exclaims the 'British resident,' the men chosen by Rosas to work out 'his purposes'?" And the "British resident" himself answers: "the most wicked, 'the most vile, the most cruel and the most corrupt.'" With this ludicrous facility he reduces the most egregious falsehoods to a simple interrogation, or monologue, in which he himself is accuser, witness and judge. General Rosas knows how to choose the men he employs; and the Confederation needs not blush on presenting its diplomatic, civil and military lists. Let us compare only the first with that of the ruthless Unitarians; and let impartial men decide. We will put an interrogation, but of facts, not of words. Who represents the Argentine Confederation at the Court of London? Doctor Manuel Moreno, who to his morality, his talents and acquirements, unites a pure and well-tried patriotism since the first days of the Republic. And who went to represent the ruthless Unitarians near Lord Aberdeen? Varela! the ruthless Unitarian Varela, a corrupt man, an accomplice in the murder of the illustrious Dorrego, Chief Magistrate of the State. Varela, the author of immoral libels, and who has left such melancholy recollections in this country, without any service to recommend him, but on the contrary the stigma of a filthy act of rapine in the National Bank of Buenos Ayres! In Paris, Ellauri, the agent of the ruthless Unitarians, is upon a par with Varela, for his bloodthirstiness, corruption, and want of honourable antecedents. Similar circumstances is the petulant and discredited ruthless Unitarian Magariños in Rio Janeiro. In the meantime the Ministers of the Argentine Government in France and in Brazil are among the most distinguished and honourable men who have figured in the American revolution. No one can dispute neither the morality, the patriotism, nor the talents and acquirements of Don Manuel de Sarratea and General Guido. General Alvear who represents the Argentine Government in the United States is one of the most illustrious capacities of the revolution. On the other hand the constant and solitary witness of the "British resident," the ruthless Unitarian José Rivera Indarte, what is he? What crime is there that he has not committed? Theft, rapine, sacrilege..... Let us suspend this ungrateful and useless examination in order not to pester the public with the private foul deeds of the ruthless Unitarians, besides their atrocious public crimes. The "British resident" adds the idle tales of the pretended "Mashorca club" which he computes to consist of "six hundred assassins who wear boots," of the "cruelties" of General Rosas "to his buffoons," of having been "a bad husband and worse son," of the decrees respecting mourning and public education being vexatious. The prolix and well grounded observation which the Argentine press has published upon these topics of defamation render any lengthened analysis of ours unnecessary; and the more so as there is not in the "British resident's" strictures any specious pretence. Every thing is coarse, vile, absurd. "Six hundred" men are given to assassinate forty in April and October; and with "boots on" in the bargain. Such a club never has existed nor been known in the country. The name of Mashorca and other impostures connected therewith are the work of the ruthless Unitarian José Rivera Indarte. It is known to what end he composed in 1835 the following disgusting lines, of which he has afterwards availed himself in his libellous print in order to create an imaginary, execrable monster! We ask the permission of the public to copy them here in their original filthiness. They are these:--

"This Marlo (L) which you now behold
 "With ruddy huek so neatly clad,
 "Has in the depth of hell we're told,
 "Sunk the foul faction Unidad.
 "Therefore with great and deep devotion,
 "Pray whilst for it you yet have room,
 "Spare me, oh save me from such doom
 "Oh! thou holy Federacion!
 "And when upon your way you speed
 "Be cautious and take heed,
 "The ruddy, intruding Cob, oh mind,
 "Don't follow you too near behind."

(1) Marlo--the ear of corn without the grain. The spike is called "Mazorca."

H. B. M.'s schooner Viper, hence 16th ult., will on her arrival at Rio Janeiro, be refitted and then proceed for England.

H. B. M.'s schooner Cockatrice Lieut. Justus Oxenham, Commander, will sail hence on the 17th inst., for Portsmouth, calling at Montevideo and Rio Janeiro.

H. B. M.'s brigantine Dolphin, 3 guns, Lieut. William O'Brien Hoare, and schooner Spider, will in future take the mails between the River Plate and Rio Janeiro.

The Dolphin has been employed on the coast of Africa and is well manned and armed—she has a crew of 60 men, and her 3 guns are long 32 pounders.

This new arrangement of the Packets was totally unexpected. The Cockatrice sails for England on Thursday next. We cannot but regret her departure inasmuch as her Commander had become in a manner domiciled amongst us, and from the respect and attachment he has ever evinced towards Buenos Ayres and its inhabitants, we are sure that he equally regrets the leaving us.

consequence of subsequent directions he was to be sent back to Rio Janeiro under an escort. Even had he succeeded in reaching Rio Grande, there is every reason to believe that he would not have been allowed to proceed any further, as the Imperial authorities in that Province are known to have received very positive orders from their Government enjoining the strictest neutrality.

Flores has finally ousted Lamas from the Riverista Ministry in Montevideo, notwithstanding their apparent reconciliation. The new Finance Minister is one Sayago, a person whose abilities are said to be on a par with those of Rivera's nominal Vicegerent, and whose only recommendation appears to be his perfect qualification to represent the juste milieu between the European and African races in Montevideo.

VICTORIA THEATRE.

One of the most elegant and crowded audiences of this season attended this Theatre on Saturday evening last; the performances were, as we stated in our last, in honour of the anniversary of the 5th of October, 1820, when General Rosas restored the legal authority of the country. The Theatre was most superbly decorated and amid those decorations were appropriate mottoes and inscriptions. The daughter of H. E. the Governor was present, and was visited during the evening in her box by a great number of persons. The curtain did not finally drop until 2 o'clock in the morning of the 6th.

There is a prophecy in France that the reign of Louis Philippe over that country will be at an end next year, so as to accord with the number of years of the two preceding dynasties, viz:—
Napoleon 18 years, 1800 to 1815. The Restoration 15 years, 1815 to 1830. Louis Philippe 15 years 1830 to 1845.

DIED.

On the 6th inst., aged 56 years, Mr. James Fisher, native of Manchester, and many years resident in Buenos Ayres, as proprietor of a board and lodging establishment. His funeral took place on the 7th at the British Protestant Cemetery and was numerously attended.
