(No. 1200.) BUENOS AYRES, SATURDAY, AUGUST 25, 1849. [Established in 1826.]

BUENOS AYRES.

By the late arrivals from Liverpool we are put in possession of London dates to the 15th of June. On the 12th the bill for the repeal of the Navigation Laws finally passed the Lords, with some trifling amendments, which were at once agreed to by the Commons. In the latter branch of the Legislature the third reading of the Parliamentary Oaths bill, admitting Jews to a share in the Legislature, was also carried by a majority of 66. Mr. Smith O'Brien and his fellow-convicts had refused to consent to the commutation of their sentence, and as there was a doubt as to the power of H. M., in the exercise of her prerogative of mercy, to commute the punishment for high treason in Ireland as well as in England, a bill had been introduced by government for the purpose of removing such a doubt, and enabling the Crown to transport the convicts for life instead of hanging and quartering them. The trial of Wm. Hamilton, for shooting at the Queen, had taken place. The prisoner pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to seven years' transportation.

The French Legislative Assembly had come to the determination of supporting the policy of Government with regard to Rome. In consequence, General Oudinot had commenced offensive operations, and at the date of the last intelligence was bombarding that city, which the Triumvirate seemed disposed to defend with the greatest obstinacy.

The above decision of the French Assembly had greatly incensed the Red Republicans, who, having been foiled in an attempt to impeach the Ministry, publicly declared in the tribune that it was necessary to have recourse to arms in order to save the Republic. In effect, on the 13th, a vast assemblage of people, some 20,000, with M. Etienne Arago and several members of the Mountain at their head, had collected together for the avowed purpose of proceeding to the Assembly with the object of presenting a petition in opposition to the war against Rome. The government, however, who had received intimation of their real intentions, had adopted the necessary measures to preserve order. The military charged the crowd, who fled precipitately, leaving unfinished the barricades which were in process of erection. Meanwhile, the Assembly declared itself en permanence, and proclaimed Paris and its vicinity in a state of siege.

In the midst of these scenes of political violence, the capital of France was suffering most severely from the effects of cholera, the number of deaths from the pestilence having on the 8th amounted to 623, and on the 9th to 612. Marshal Bugeaud was among the victims.

The fugitive remains of the late Frankfort Parliament, assembled at Stuttgard on the 6th of June, and after passing some very violent resolutions against the Constitution of the German Empire, as published by the governments of Prussia, Hanover, and Saxony, agreed to nominate an Executive Council of eight persons, under the title of Regency, to administer the affairs of the Empire, and to enforce the Frankfort Constitution.

In regard to the general aspect of affairs on the continent, we copy the following from J. H. Schroder & Co's. Liverpool Market Review of the 15th June—

Politics are becoming daily more uneatisfactory. The hopes that moderate principles would have prevailed, and that a certain degree of tranquility would have been restored, are disappointed, and the extremes of the political parties which divide Europe appear on the eve of a determined conflict, which will decide the existence of the one or the other. Such is now the political combination all over the Continent, that if either party shou d gain, on any point, signal advantages, the effect would quickly be felt throughout all the disturbed districts, however distant. The termination of the Danish war is now out of calculation, the blockade of the German ports is enforced with increased rigor.

Business had become more animated in the full expectation of a renewal and extension of our commercial relations with the Continent, but it is fast relapsing into dulness in all these branches, and such is the uncertainty and timidity felt by commercial men that they avoid all extended operations and engagements. The money market is well supplied and at low rates, but the numerous applications for loans either on account of foreign states, or for private undertakings, find no willing respondents.

UNITED STATES.

New York, May 21.

Considerable alarm, far more than is justifiable under the circumstances, is felt throughout the city in regard to the cholera. Some of our physicians are of the opinion that the disease has not yet assumed the form of cholera proper; others, whose opinion is quite as reliable, decide that it is cholera, but of a mild type, and that so far, most of the victims to it have been persons vitiated by intemperance, filthiness and complicated diseases, and would have died even without the cholera morbus.

The prompt measures taken by the authorities to cleanse the filthy dens at the Five Points, will probably arrest the epidemic, whatever it is. Temporal hospitals have been arranged to which patients are conveyed on the first symptoms, and the infected district is being thoroughly purged with lime and other disinfectants. We are strong in the hope that these early efficient steps will speedily remove all signs of the cholera. We repeat our advice, let those who are in health be temperate in diet and general habits; avoid excitements and bathe often. Those simple precautions are the best guard against any and all diseases.

The Past two weeks have furnished more fearful tragedy and casualty, in different parts of the country, than we remember ever to have known in a similar space of time. The terrible Crevasse at New Orleans, threatening the destruction of that city; the Astor Place riot, resulting in the death of more than twenty persons; the disaster on board the steamer Empire, with a loss of between twenty and thirty lives; the appearance of the cholera in our city; the burning of a large portion of Watertown; the fire at Milwaukie; the terrible conflagration at St. Louis, burning over three hundred buildings and twenty steamers, and destroying about seventy lives, with some dozen or twenty murders and suicides, form a tableau of disaster and death seldom recorded within two weeks.

Add to these the Canada riots, and the picture challenges comparison. It is hard to say which will prove in the end the most fearful of the features of this picture. The loss of life at the Opera House, at St. Louis, and on board the Empire was short usual, but should the Crevasse continue at New Orleans the destruction of life and property promises to swallow up all the other events as minor occurrences. It would seem as though Providence was pouring a special vial of wrath upon the earth, either as a punishment or a warning. Applied either way, the moral may not be without its good.

Baltimore, May, 10th—10 p.m.

The Southern mail has arrived with dates from New Orleans to the 12th inst.

The great crevasse above the city was still unchecked. The water was flowing out rapidly, and thousands of acres of land were covered. The crevasse was widening and the water was gradually rising.

The Pleasure entertains the worst apprehensions and thinks the most serious calamities may be realized. Thousands of workmen have been employed to close the Crevasse, but have not been able to make any successful headway.

The water in the swamps, and in the Second Municipality is gradually rising. People are daily moving out and abandoning their dwellings. Some were taking refuge in the second and third stories of their houses, using boats to get out and in. As before stated, White and Benton streets, with portions of Hercules, and Dryades Market Houses, in the latter street, were entirely surrounded by the flood and were only accessible by boats and hacks, producing great distress among the inhabitants.

The north bank of the new canal was overflown and the people of the 7th Ward and second municipality were preparing to escape from their abodes.

A considerable portion of the shell road near the Half Way House, was sub-merged, and the water covering the street at the New Basin warehouse, near to the head of the Basin.

About 300 houses were surrounded by water.

At last accounts some workmen employed at the Crevasse were dying with cholera.

THE LATE STEAMBOAT DISASTER.

From the "Troy Budget, Extra."

About ten o'clock last evening, the steamer Empire was run foul of by the schooner Noah Brower, in Newburgh bay, nearly opposite Newburg, staving a hole in her, forward of the wheels. She commenced sinking rapidly, and in a few minutes the water reached the state room deck. Fortunately, as the water reached this deck, the engine became on this and the inside deck buoyed her up so that she sank gradually, until the Rip Van Winkle came alongside and took off those who were so fortunate as to reach the upper deck.

The scene was a terrible one to those on board, and to those who were so fortunate as to get on board the schooner, which was a small proportion to the number on board. For some fifteen minutes before the arrival of the Rip Van Winkle, it was expected that the Empire must go down with two-thirds of her passengers on board; but just at this critical moment, probably from the cause mentioned above, her sinking was less rapid, and the water did not attain to the depth of over three or four feet in the state room hall, until towed ashore by the Rip Van Winkle.

About this time the steamer from Hudson, bound down the river, came alongside, and took those passengers who wished to return to New York. The Rip also left quite a number at Newburg. The officers and men of the boat deserve great praise for their efforts to render all the aid in their power; and the kindness to sufferers can never be forgotten.

Our friends who were not so fortunate as that no less than 5 or 6 must have been lost—and perhaps 25 to 30. One lady and a colored man belonging to the boat are known to have been drowned.

From the "Albany Atlas."

Capt. Schuyler landed sixty of the Empire's passengers at Newburg, and brought the same number to this city, with but little wearing apparel on. A large number were taken off the vessel. Mr. Burden, of Troy, was picked up floating on a dry goods box, minus his hat.

Many appalling scenes were depicted to us by those who assisted in rescuing the passengers from their perilous boat. In the ladies' cabin, a female cry was heard soon after the Rip came alongside; the top covering was torn off, but before this was done it had ceased. Another passenger states that a woman, while in a frantic state of mind threw her infant child overboard, and was afterwards taken on board the Rip, where she became rational for a moment, but realizing the loss of her child, she fainted; has since been removed to Troy. She landed at Newburg in almost a frantic state.

From the "Albany Knickerbocker."

A young lady, in making her escape from the cabin, waiting through the water up to her waist, discovered an infant floating on a mattress. She dropped her carpet bag, rescued the little innocent, and restored it to its mother's arms.

A poor Swedish man, who arrived in this country a day or two since, with his uncle and aunt and four children, two of them a pair of twins, took passage on the Empire on Thursday night, intending to go to Canandaigua, came up in the Rip Van Winkle yesterday morning. He found that the four orphan children were drowned. He was penniless. The Scotch society took care of him. The two children belonging to the deceased woman were provided for by Mrs. Peter Smith. Their father remained with the wreck, to recover the body of his wife.

MUST FOR CALIFORNIA.—What Congress failed to do for California, private enterprise has taken in hand. A party has just gone from Northampton, Mass., taking with them all the machinery, and the implements necessary for coining gold and silver, and a competent assayer. Their object is to establish a private mint, purchase gold as fast as they can obtain it for circulation. They will be able to coin $10,000 per day, and their enterprise is said to have the sanction of government. What a commentary is this upon the enterprise of our Government.

CALIFORNIA ADVENTURERS are returning in large numbers to St. Louis, being satisfied from their experience on the frontier, that home and its associations are greater prizes than Californian gold Whole companies have been disorganized at St. Joseph, and broken up, in consequence of feuds and personal recreations. The kind of "association" is not congenial to the Western pioneers.

A large sheet, or circular, has been sent to us by mail, from Montpelier, Vermont, entitled "Important new source of government wealth and national prosperity!" It is a new plan for a Railroad to the Pacific, with an exposition of the ways and means by which its construction may be secured within five years at a cost of less than $100,000,000. Here this, the promoters offers a scheme by which the building of the road may be made to secure immediate, permanent and effectual relief in the money markets, and promise the rapid diffusion of wealth among all classes.

To accomplish these very desirable objects, it is proposed to issue government stock bearing four per c nt. interest, to pay for building the National Road, this stock to be made the basis of Banking capital by a law of Congress, such issuing the establishment of a Bank or Banks for this purpose, and making those banks the depositaries of the public money throughout the Union. A modification of the tariff seems to be expected, but the views of the parties upon this point are not stated.

The amount of government stock is estimated at one hundred millions, which would imply an increase of Banking Capital to the same extent, and a proportionate increase of the precious metals, to form the basis of the proposed currency. This increase of the precious metals, the circular argues, will be obtained from California, and from all parts of the world, by the new channels of trade which the construction of the National Road will open, that road being the highway be wees Europe and the Atlantic ports of America on the one hand, and India, China, and Japan on the other—Such is the project of "the American Free Banking Association of Montpelier, Vermont." It is said to have received the endorsement of many distinguished statesmen. We shall have abundant time to examine the merits and demerits of the scheme before the meeting of Congress.

THE CRISIS IN CANADA.—Very many misapprehend the nature of the agitation at present going on in Canada. The party committing the late excesses in Montreal, are not liberals, as some of our readers and correspondents suppose. They are radicals, but radicals only in favor of the British Government. Of all the mob who burned down the Parliament House, not one but would stand by and fight for John Bull to the last. They are real blood and bone tories, and in venting their rage upon the ministry which signed the Indemnity bill, they, like other blind mobs, did not perceive that they were destroying their own property.

The present government or Legislature of Canada is liberal by a large majority, and the tories comprising the moderate class, are throughout the Upper and Lower provinces in a minority as one to three. But they seem to grow feeble in proportion as their numbers decline. The Indemnity bill we regard as a just one, and though it may seem hard that the Canadas should be taxed to pay the losses of a class chiefly connected with the rebellion of 1837, it must be remembered that a similar bill was passed as a precedent, indemnifying the tories who suffered by the same rebellion.

It is not probable that this domestic quarrel will have an immediate effect towards annexation, but it will widen the breach between the liberals and tories, and thus pave the way for great changes. The burning of the Parliament House, a noble and venerable building, is to be deeply regretted. Its Library, which was all destroyed, was perhaps the finest on this continent. Many of its books and MSS. were invaluable, and can never be restored. On the breaking up of the Monastic Establishments in Canada, most of their literary treasures passed to this Library. All Europe had contributed to it, and now, all that is left is cinders and ashes. How true it is, that all ends are immediate. In their blind fury they smite statues, and paintings, and books—monument art and sacred knowledge find no mercy at their hands.—Sun.)

IMPORTANT FROM ST. DOMIN O.

We have received intelligence from St. Domingo to the 27th ult. by the arrival of the schooner Forest, Capt. Pa kie, from Port-au-Plait. A great reverse had taken place in the position of affairs in that Island. President Soulouque with his army had been encamped within a few miles of St. Domingo City, using water from a stream whose source was near the city. The had been poisoned by the Dominicans, and occasioned much sickness and a great many deaths in the Haytien army. At this time the Dominicans attacked them, on the 16th April, killing great numbers and taking many prisoners, and nearly capturing Soulouque himself. The army was entirely put to rout.

On the 21st of April the town of Azua was recaptured, and General Santa mar had across the lines which divide the two provinces, expressing his determination to be the aggressor and to kill every prisoner he took.

LATER FROM ST. DOMINGO.—We learn from Capt Creighton, of the schooner S. & J. J. Williams, arrived yesterday from the city of St. Domingo, which port he left on the 1st inst., that there had been three successful battles fought by the Dominicans; the Haytien army had been beaten and dispersed both in the North and the South. At one time the Haytiens were within 3 miles of the city: a desperate battle ensued, in which a large number were killed on both sides; no prisoners were spared. The Haytiens in their retreat had burnt Azua, and destroyed a large amount of property. Captain Warren, of H. M. S. Firebrand, had offered the American Consul any assistance he might require to protect American citizens or property. The brig steamer of war was also present during the trouble. Most of the merchants had shipped their goods to the other islands. No business of any kind was doing. It is thought this will be the last time the Haytiens will attempt to conquer the Spaniards.—(Ibid.)

MISCELLANY.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT.—The brilliant light was again exhibited on Tuesday evening, by Mr. Staite, the apparatus being erected on the summit of one of the piers of Hungerford Suspension-bridge, on the Middlesex shore. The beams of light which thence descended successively to the Surrey shore, the buildings of Hungerford market, and on the frontage of Somerset-house, and Waterloo-bridge, from all which the reflexes thrown was so intense as to render visible the smallest objects, and completely overpower all other sources of illumination. The power of the apparatus thus employed, when the rays are collected and concentrated by a reflector placed behind, is calculated as equaling the light of 750 candles. The inventor has, however, constructed an instrument for domestic purposes, which gives a light equal to from eight to forty candles, with the advantage, that the blaze can be produced and retained under an air-tight glass shade, so as to prevent the possibility of ignition.

BELL STEAM GAUGE.—An ingenious application of electricity has been made by Mr. Arthur Dunn, by means of which signals are given that indicate the pressure of steam in the boiler of an engine. Tubes being filled with mercury are made part of a galvanic circuit, and connected with bells as the mercury rises from increased pressure in the boiler; the circuit is then completed, and the bells respectively rung indicate the amount of pressure. In this way attention is called to the pressure of the steam the moment it exceeds its ordinary and safe working condition.—Athenæum.

THE MIMOSA.—A new invention, by Mr. W. Pine, will be found of much use by ladies who are afflicted with deafness. It is in shape like an ordinary "wreath" for the head, fitting with an elastic and compressing band. Under the flower, which is of the convolvulus species, a tube is placed, which is inserted in the ear. This is effected all the convenience of an ear trumpet, not only without its unsightliness, but with the addition of an elegant ornament to the head.

In our last number we quoted the highest price of dorados during the week $163, the lowest $494. These quotations have elicited some remarks on the part of some of our subscribers who realized transactions in Patriot doubloons at $497, that being stated as the highest price at which they had been sold during the week. On referring to the party who furnishes us with the prices of specie we find those much to be well genuine, the prices given in our last number being nevertheless correct. The difference arises merely from the fact that our quotations of the highest and lowest prices of specie during the week have been hitherto given under the general head of Doubloons, the highest price correspondingly naturally with the maximum at which Spanish doubloons have been sold each week, and the lowest with the minimum at which Patriot doubloons have been realized. In order, however, to obviate mistakes in future, we shall henceforth, as in the present number, give the highest and lowest prices of each.
