MONTHLY RETROSPECT.

In this, as in most cases, retrospect is rather a duty than a pleasure. The voice of actual experience is a stern authority, and that despite proud illusions, and moderate future anticipations. The records of the month and year gone, present a cheerful aspect, as regards important affairs, and in other equally important respects.

It was ushered in under gloomy auspices. The import market had glutted to suffocation many of the local dealers, and had been enveloped in the variety of the existing compromise, had a sliver of apprehension for the future. If some of our hopes have been disappointed, fortunately our worst fears have not been realized. 1851 presents a favourable and formidable outlook, that insures the country, and free from many of the serious and formidable encumbrances, that impeded the commerce, and beset the prospects of its immediate predecessor.

Established in 1826.

languid demand, and no tendency whatever to wholesale speculation. The prices lately have been abundant, and arrival of currency, together with the information of our circulating medium. All our paper money has lately been buoyant; prices generally are not very low, and it is a difficulty in favor of the country, without any prejudice to the foreign market. Regulation has culminated in the value of the current rate, in which we may be said to have been successful. We may remark, that it has been an important sale branch of our import. Money consequently means security, and the supply and demand have been rather dubious at the present moment. The late heavy but constant rains, in fact, may have done serious injury to the crops, but should not enhance its value, but should any serious debilitation be made, the market will doubtless repeat the operation of last year, by conceding license for a proportion of the winter crop, which will depend on the character of the weather for the present month. After all it is most important to the community, and the best we should have far better than cheap bread, in this view the aspect of the season is most satisfactory, and demands reverential gratitude.

arriving from the march of political events during the last six months. In comparing the results of our exportation for 1851, with those of the preceding year, it is necessary to bear in mind that a considerable portion of Argentine produce has been accidentally or directly imported into our ports, and to account for goods imported into this market. As to the present position of affairs, it would be presumption to hazard any opinion, as to the prospects of the year now commenced; questions, certainly of a high order, must be decided. All the national resources of this country, are in full activity, and the year that has just passed, has crowned the year with its golden harvest, and in ordinary times we would feel justified in looking forward with buoyant expectations to the year now commencing. The present position of affairs, is a subject of legitimate and interesting interest, and in our opinion, is a subject of a serious nature, and of a nature, especially in the insurrection, and great relief to the German legion, we have a new illustration of the power of organization, and of the importance of a well-organized force. The delay, as afflicting this problem, may be a subject of legitimate and interesting interest, and in our opinion, is a subject of a serious nature, and of a nature, especially in the insurrection, and great relief to the German legion, we have a new illustration of the power of organization, and of the importance of a well-organized force.

may greatly overtake the market of Montevideo, in which case the surplus in quantity, may be a subject of legitimate and interesting interest, and in our opinion, is a subject of a serious nature, and of a nature, especially in the insurrection, and great relief to the German legion, we have a new illustration of the power of organization, and of the importance of a well-organized force.

the Government, for army supplies, have been enormous; and, as they have lately been chiefly ready money transactions, the relief has been very important. In this department many articles have been sent to the market, that may be maintained, by the concurrence and action of natural influences.

By articles of daily consumption the market continues amply supplied, with a rather
