

The workhous of Trades Union only contains some 2,000 papers at present. A few months since the guardians had to provide workhouse accommodation and a few more from the Province as many. Older, and equally gratifying symptoms are accumulating around us. The national resources are being developed. New mines of copper and lead are every day coming to light, and new sources of employment, situated on the coast and in inland factories, are proposed and debated with earnestness and sincerity. ... After all, perhaps, the most important element in our progress is to be found in the advance and profitable working of the Brazilian railways. ...
