Beeching the favorite. After an extremely pretty race Bay Middleton was landed a very clever winner, which no sooner was ascertained than general acclamations of rejoicing burst from all sides and all classes. His endurance over such a long and arduous race has been one of the first and principal supporters of the Society, and till now rather scornfully used by Dana Fox.

After re-weighing, he was re-checked and then chaired. Such unmitigated signs of public approbation and sympathy, can hardly be better recalled.

So ended the first day's sport; credit to all those connected with the same. And now commensured anxiety among the interested as to the result of the last day's racing, the Hack Races, Hurdle Races, Matches, and Sweep Stakes.

The second day's racing was on Thursday 11th inst., a feat day, being that of St. Martin, Patron Saint of Buenos Ayres, and in consequence the numerous religious ceremonies in town prevented very many being on the course, who otherwise would not have been present. The attendance was numerous. The Stand certainly was far from filled, and sundry families preferred remaining in their lodgings to availing themselves of the better view which would have been afforded from it: the ever desirable presence of Lady attendance, was not altogether wanting, and several of those deservingly appreciated, kindly patronized the meeting. Our friendly neighbours the Montevideoans, too, sent up a handful of their respective friends, who were well welcomed, and who, to participate in the pleasures of the day, induce a still larger deputiation at future meetings, and so that we may be assured to follow our example, in which case, many of ourals may have a similar opportunity of returning their acknowledgments, and pay to them a reciprocal visit.

With the exception of the Hurdle Race, the entries for the remaining ones were only declared on the course, consequently, there was no printed programme as yesterday.

With one two exceptions, the contest of racing has been seldom or ever witnessed, and in some instances, the interest and excitement, were past all bounds.

Order was the "order of the day," and good humor and good sport, ridged throughout. The purveyor of the "good thing of this life," replenished their supplies, and those who had convenience and accommodation for themselves, on the course, seemed desirous to seek, and attend to the comfort of their attendants, from the Vessels of the fleet.

Who appeared much interested in the sport, called forth due approbation, and now let us go off to the

More interest could not be had, than in the contest of the "Derby" in England, than this match created on the Buenos Ayres course—in fact the opponent it was perhaps the race of the day—

"The Trial," a dark horse, but supposed and believed to be a great colt, said to be not long in training, but without having exerted his powers, either yesterday or to-day, was the property and favorite of nonmember of the Buenos Ayres Club, and was trained and owned by one of its most sporting members, met with riding and was well known to the public, and it was the previous day, and the killing weight he had now to carry. His horse was in the 24th round, and was the only one to have cleared the "Trial," maintaining his inside position, and generally being the favorite of the public.

There were however the struggle may be said to have ended; the rider of "Engadator" was the only one to have cleared the "Trial," and he did so quietly and steadily from when he piloted horse "Engadator" a very clever winner of the San Martin's day in Buenos Ayres hear such maddening shrieks and yells of delight, as proceeded from the thousands of St. Patrick, St. George and St. Andrew, when the game and noble old horse most beautifully ridden, quickly returned in a masterly and dignified manner to the post, and was met by the Steerer to the weighing tent.

Hats were plucked into the air, and smashed in an extent which transpired the belief that next meeting the hatless party will be presented to be run for; and if the lungs of the Steerer, who was the only one to have cleared the "Trial," may follow, less than a horse to the stock of refreshments.

It was not owing to any party spirit, or any partial bias, but to the fact that the horse, who was the only one to have cleared the "Trial," was the only one to have cleared the "Trial," and he did so quietly and steadily from when he piloted horse "Engadator" a very clever winner of the San Martin's day in Buenos Ayres hear such maddening shrieks and yells of delight, as proceeded from the thousands of St. Patrick, St. George and St. Andrew, when the game and noble old horse most beautifully ridden, quickly returned in a masterly and dignified manner to the post, and was met by the Steerer to the weighing tent.

BUENOS AYRES.

The following is the note of the Government of Mendoza, alluded to in our last number.

"Mendoza Oct. 14th, 1852.
To H. E. the Minister of Foreign Relations of the Argentine Republic.

The Government of Mendoza has been in formed of a communication addressed to this Ministry by the Minister of the Province of Buenos Ayres, a certified copy of which is enclosed under No. 1.

As the undersigned, after the communications of the 14th and 15th Sept, had not received any other despatch from the national Ministry, but only the request for a ratification for directing his march, he considered it expedient to reply through the medium of the Ministry, but as he considered it expedient to see the disposition of the Province, as the Minister of Foreign Relations will be informed by copy No. 2.

In acting thus the undersigned has also been influenced by the consideration, that though the Province of Buenos Ayres, under the influence of a revolution, now discovers its disaffection in respect to its own peculiar interests, it is nevertheless a sister Province, that shows itself favorably disposed to drop close the ties of fraternity with the others, and to concert spontaneously with its co-operation to the national organization.

The undersigned trusts that the Minister, knowledge or the Province, has to the National Authority, as to the march corresponding to the situation of the Province, as the Minister of Foreign Relations may vary.

PADO P. SERRA
Minister of Foreign Relations

Proclamation of General Urquiza.—The undersigned, in the name of the nation, what it says, and what leaves unaided. No one ever questioned the glory of Caseros; but the glory of Caseros is not the glory of the 11th of Sept, as the victory of Marcho or Austerlitz is the aspirations of the Argentine people, and the arbitrary deportation of Buenos Ayres citizens, the National indignation, and the National indignation, the illegal usurpation of the Government, and the unconstitutional intention of dictating the future Constitution of the Republic, are the real charges that stand against General Urquiza, and the efficient causes of the revolution of the 11th September: yet not one of these charges is a tacit admission that they are indefensible.

In the palmy days of the Holy Alliance, we were regaled with the doctrine of passive obedience, and the duty of the citizen to the right divine; in the document under consideration, the order of things is altogether reversed, and the duty of the citizen to be accomplished by the passive resistance theory, we congratulate the friends of humanity on the important discovery; and trust we may see it realized in the Province of Entre Rios.

But that Sin did not set without showing its effect, and it is calculated to serve as a blind to the Interior Provinces, by assuming a divergence of opinion in this Province as to the march of the 11th Sept, we leave our readers to judge.

The Provisional Director of the Argentine Confederation to the Inhabitants of the Province of Buenos Ayres.

The first rays of the Sun of the 3rd of February, still illuminated your forehead subjected to the stroke of the three centuries, and showed the world once more the heavy chains that bound those, who in May 1810 had presented to the world the first Argentine Republic, and had enslaved the whole of America.

✓ Viva la Confederation Argentina!

I, who had deplored your misfortunes, had the glory of announcing to you our termination, and your complete liberty. On that day I gave you the word of the Republic, and to the generous allies, covered with blood, and with the dust of the combat, but who were the first to give the word of friendship made all forget who had fought on opposite sides.

On 11th of Sept., aspires to destroy the fruits obtained on the 8th of February. The union of all which, boasted the standard of liberty, is today covered by the flag of anarchy, annihilating it, destroying the common bond of nationality on which it is supported.

It is the duty of the Argentine people to promulgate a law, and to veil their design, stigmatize with the epithet of tyrant, the most heroic and generous graces of liberty.

They accuse your liberator and your most ardent friend of being your executioner, tantalizing you as the first of tyrants. All those who were so—as you are aware were your friends, and your liberators, and since then have been confounded with the victors.

You are bound therefore, inhabitants of Buenos Ayres, to cause your voice to be heard, and to give the merited retribution to all the odious which they attempt to cover their criminal design.

That is your duty, that the world, which has already pronounced you guilty of the facts, may not afflict upon you all the stigma of unjust, or complain you in the imputation of being tyrants, who wish to see you upon their foreheads, who wished to see you with your own hands.

They call you to arms, they show you new fields of battle; and they present you as enemies to your liberators. The ground which they cultivate with their lances, already converted into ploughshares; they convert into fertile fields into barren, converted into blood, to render them barren.

They invite you to carry the shout of war to the all the odious which they attempt to cover their criminal design.

They invite you to carry the shout of war to the all the odious which they attempt to cover their criminal design.
