At 8.30 she passed the Boque de Guazú, and steamed on until 10.30 p.m., when it came on a thick fog, and she was obliged to anchor about the Vuelta de Botija. At 2.10 a.m. on Thursday morning the weather cleared up, as the moon rose, and she reached San Nicolas at 10.30 a.m., remaining there until 1.20 for the night, when she left for Rosario, and arrived there at 4.30 p.m., making the whole distance from Buenos Ayres in 21 hours and 30 minutes of steaming.

Before reaching San Nicolas it was found that the consumption of fuel had been greater than was expected, or that the quality of the coal was inferior, as the quantity taken in Rosario would have been very little, and sufficient to have taken the vessel to Rosario in 21 hours and 30 minutes of steaming... Sept. 29th.—Note from General Hornos to the Minister of War, dated San Nicolas, Sept. 23, stating that he was about to remove his Division towards the centre of the Department, but he deemed it best to remain there, with the general tranquility that prevailed, that some veteran force should be stationed at said post, for the protection of commerce and the civil authorities.

Note from the Ministry of Government and Foreign Relations, warning consules, Captains of vessels, and whom it may concern, that ship papers, passports, &c., must be duly corrected in the Provincial Consuls resident in foreign Ports; and that parties not complying therewith must abide the consequences after the term of six months from all other destination, no entry will be admitted without a formal compliance with the established regulations.

MONTHLY RETROSPECT.
Beginning from the first of the last month of our winter, and at our on this occasion it included a long train of holidays, with the engrossing excitement of sacred and justly cherished associations, there was no good cause to complain of it as a busy season. The local press had been tirelessly active; and still larger transactions might have been effected, had the wholesale market been better assorted. Some heavy stocks of rather odd assortments, have been cleared off by public auction. These are the only ones that are ready for sale.

These are the only ones that are ready for sale, in the country—more of this Province, that appear once more in full operation. With dealers for the sister Provinces, comparatively little business is done; and may probably continue so, till they can see their way more clearly, though the present alacrity, besought to by the late intervention of the Provincial Director, and the highly judicious precautions that were taken, and served this local policy, this uncertainty has a withering effect on commercial enterprises, and renders a prompt
